Meanwhile, the Park Service, also with the Department of Agriculture, asks us to "PLEASE DO NOT FEED THE ANIMALS" because they may grow dependent and not learn to take care of themselves.

Often called a racist newspaper we accept the compliment, and are fascinated by the Zionist's obsession with keeping his race supreme, segregated from every other that he would put into a one-size-fits-all straitjacket. Yes, control is why he invests heavily in a money-losing media cracy. Not all Jews are communists, but most communists are Jews. Racists, sexists, bicyclists and typists, we discriminate between the finer and more base qualities easily observed, just as everyone does, but also go a bit further and admit those differences between models, types, brands and races. Abraham Lincoln, political tyrant

By Chip Wood
personalliberty.com

We've spent a lot of time recently bashing "the worst President who ever lived." (That's a description of the current occupant of the White House by many of my readers.) Instead, this time let's do something different. Let's turn our attention to the Great Emancipator, generally acclaimed as the greatest American President of them all.

But was he really?

I don't know what they teach in United States history classes today, but back in the middle of the last century, when I was in elementary school, there was absolutely no question about how we were to regard Abraham Lincoln. We were taught to feel a reverence bordering on awe for Honest Abe, the eloquent martyr who saved the Union.

We were required to memorize the Gettysburg Address. And if we were lucky enough to join a field trip to our nation's capital, one of the most significant events was our visit to the Lincoln Memorial. (A few of us rapsallions spoiled the solemnity of the moment by sliding down the sides of the monument.)

That was what we were taught in the grade schools of Cleveland. And I suspect it wasn't any different in other schools in the North. Some of you sons and daughters of the South will have to tell me what your teachers and history books said.

It wasn't until I became an adult and started reading history on my own that I began to doubt the version of events I was taught several decades earlier. For example, did you know that Lincoln suspended civil liberties in the North, including the writ of habeas corpus? That he filled the jails with more than 13,000 political prisoners, all incarcerated without due process? The Supreme Court protested Lincoln's disregard for our Constitutional protections, but the President replied he had a war to fight. Since he commanded the army, Lincoln won that argument.

He said... that?

And speaking of the war, guess who uttered these words:

"Any people anywhere, being inclined and having the power, have the right to rise up and shake off the existing government and form a new one that suits them better. This is a most valuable – a most sacred right – a right, which we hope and believe, is to liberate the world. Nor is this right confined to cases in which the whole people of an existing government may choose to exercise it. Any portion of such people that can, may revolutionize, and make their own, of so much of their territory as they inhabit."

I'll admit this is a trick question. The speaker was Lincoln. But he was not talking about the Southern States that tried to secede from the Union. No, these remarks were made in 1847, when Lincoln was defending the right of Texans to demand their independence from Mexico. A dozen years later, when six Southern States tried to declare their independence, Lincoln's response was to smash them to bits.

As a child, I never questioned the assertion that the South was wrong to secede. And that Lincoln was right to use as much force as necessary to preserve the Union. Later, as I grew to understand the (See "Truth always," page 7)

MOSSAD strikes again. In Yemen’s southern city of Taizz, two motorbike-mounted gunmen opened fire and killed an American citizen on March 18 who was working there as deputy director of a Swedish language center. After having finished their job the attackers fled.

SOLDIERS are better off committing a war crime than exposing one. 23-year-old Bradley Manning leaked thousands of cables to whistle-blowing website WikiLeaks that show U. S. pilots gunning down more than a dozen Iraqis in Baghdad, including two journalists for Reuters, then killing a father of two who stopped to help them. “It’s their fault for bringing kids into a battle,” one U. S. pilot can be heard remarking. None of the soldiers who carried out that war crime have been punished, nor high-ranking officials who authorized it. Committing a war crime more likely will get the soldier a medal than prison, while Manning remains in prison without trial and is tortured.

The Confederate flag, symbol of pride and independence for millions of Americans celebrating their Southern heritage and for non-Southerners who have an attachment to the values held dear by the South, is under attack again, this time from a school district in the Beaver State. Ironically, the flag in question is not even the easily-identifiable Confederate Army battle flag, but a variant with the word “REDNECK” emblazoned across it that was purchased from a local Oregon Walmart for under $10.

The story is a cautionary tale for those wishing to identify with symbols that have fallen out of favor by the politically-correct mainstream media, whose corrosive influence on the citizens of this once-great nation cannot be understated. As covered extensively in American Free Press and its predecessor The Spotlight, the mainstream media, or MSM, is a network of broadcast, print and now online enterprises controlled and manipulated by a handful of powerful Jewish families who use their enormous influence to sway public opinion and dictate to policy makers. Of the biggest media players, only News Corporation is not controlled by a Jew, but by Rupert Murdoch, whose pro-Israel proclivities help to complete the circle.

Ken Webber, a 29-year-old married father of two, had a comfortable job as a school bus driver in Medford, Oregon, until

“It clearly is,” said Boardman. “Mr. Webber’s a brave man,” said Boardman. “He was under an awful lot of economic pressure to take that flag down. At the time he was fired, I think he had two children, one of them under six months old, and that was the only income he had. He’s not out for blood or anger but he’s also not going to back down on his right to wave a flag.”

“I feel very good representing Mr. Webber,” continued Boardman. “He’s such a decent fellow and his motives are wonderful. It’s unfortunate that we had to bring this to a lawsuit, but we wrote a letter demanding that Mr. Webber receive his job back because he had been improperly and unconstitutionally terminated.”

AFP asked if they had any problems with him prior to this.

“They had no problems whatsoever with Mr. Webber before this,” said Boardman.

AFP asked what remedies they are asking for in the lawsuit.

“We’ve asked for his job back,” said Boardman. “We’re also going to be seeking a permanent injunction, that the school district and that First Student not violate the First Amendment again in the future. Oh, we might ask for a few dollars. But that’s what lawyers do.”

AFP asked if he is representing Weber pro bono.

“I won’t get paid a penny for this,” said Boardman.

A new office employee stands clueless before the shredder. “Can I help you” asks a friendly co-worker. “Yeah, how does this thing function?” The reply: “Very simple. Give me that whole stack of papers you’re holding and I’ll feed them in here. Listen; hear it going automatically?” The novice smiles, much relieved. “And now where do my copies come out?”

“The doctor said he would have me on my feet in two weeks.”

“And did he?”
“Yes. Had to sell my car to pay the bill.”

AIPAC’s power, or America’s cowardice?

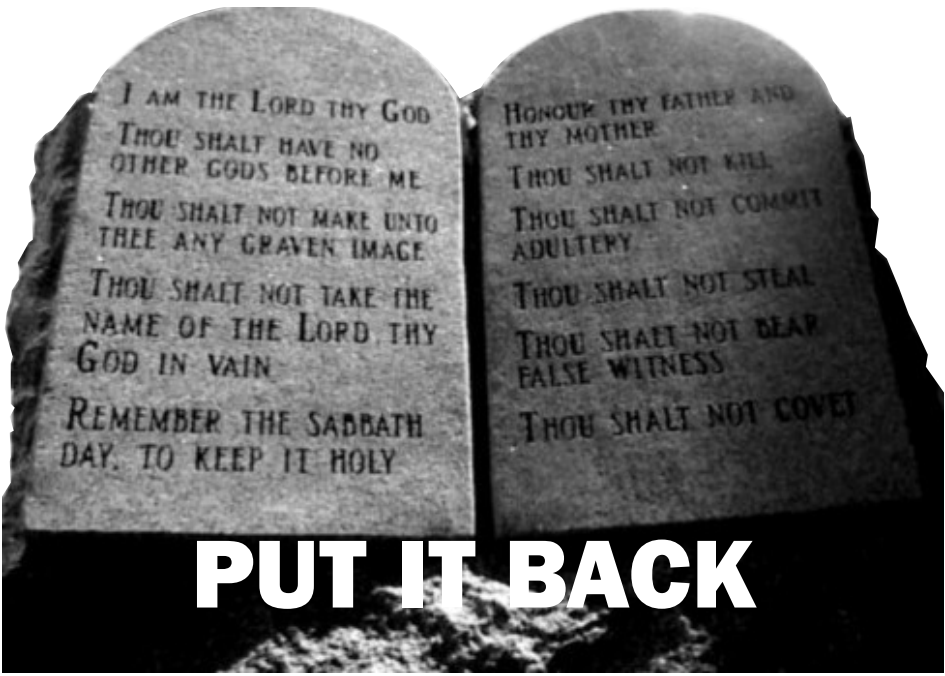

By Charley Reese
thetruthseeker.co.uk
1996, and Bill Clinton was president. To give the rascal his due, he was laboring mightily to make the Middle East peace talks work. The same year, three American neoconservatives produced a policy paper for newly-elected Israeli prime minister Benjamin Netanyahu.

They were Richard Perle, Douglas Feith and David Wurmser, recommending that Netanyahu abandon the peace process, reject “land for peace” and strengthen Israel’s defenses in order to confront Syria and Iraq. The document said, “This effort can focus on removing Saddam Hussein from power in Iraq – an important Israeli strategic objective in its own right.” It also recommended that Israel use pretexts for preemptive attacks.

Now, if all of this sounds familiar – and it should – that’s because Perle, Feith and Wurmser joined other neocons in the Bush administration. Perle was especially vocal in pushing the war on Iraq. They had two pretexts: the attack of Sept. 11, even though Saddam Hussein had nothing to do with it, and the mythical weapons of mass destruction.

Netanyahu did quit the peace process. And, at a cost of $200 billion and nearly 1,000 American lives, Israel achieved its objective – removing Saddam from power. It didn’t cost Israel one shekel or one life.

Furthermore, until Iraq blew up in its face, the Bush administration was laying the groundwork to attack Syria, the other country Perle and his crowd named as a target for Israel. It imposed sanctions on Syria despite the fact that Syria cooperated with the war on terror. The other target of the Israelis is Iran.

When Bush first started talking about terrorism, he said “terrorists with global reach” to distinguish between al-Qaeda and outfits with strictly local agendas. That did not suit the Israelis and their American supporters. They wanted Israel’s enemies to be our enemies, and so the distinction was soon dropped, and Israel’s enemies were added to the official list of terrorist

How did it come to federal precedence over the States?

By Al Benson, Jr.
Reviewing the infamous Fourteenth Amendment in a nutshell, we can see that it accomplished certain ends that were entirely consistent with Northern revolutionary aims for both the War of Northern Aggression and for the revolutionary period after that war. We might as well get used to referring to the war as a revolution, for, in truth, it was the real American Revolution. It was a revolution in which God-given liberties were exchanged for “privileges and immunities” granted by an all-powerful federal government in Washington – the same as today.

After the shooting phase of that revolution was over, the United States played the part of Esau on a national scale. We had traded our God-given rights for a mess of federal pottage, and now we weep, as did Esau, because we do not have God’s blessing. We don’t have that blessing now because, in our apostasy, we don’t deserve it now.

Instead of enjoying God’s blessing, we now labor under such apostate vehicles as Thaddeus Stevens’ inglorious Fourteenth Amendment.

I have heard conservatives and patriots defend the 14th Amendment and I can only wonder what public brain laundry they were “educated” in. How many realize that the 14th Amendment redefined citizenship in this country? Up until the War, a man was a citizen of the United States due to being first a citizen of a particular State. A man was a U. S. citizen because he was first and foremost a citizen of Texas or Louisiana or New Jersey. His State citizenship gave him status as a U. S. citizen.

The reconstructed “nation”

After adoption of the 14th Amendment, however, a man became foremost a citizen of the United States. His State citizenship was, to all intents and purposes, secondary at best and beneath notice at worst. This and the mindset it produced was consistent with Northern revolutionary aims and opened the door for future federal intervention in the various States, in areas the federal government had no business being in, such as education; and today, health care and oversight of school lunches and all manner of programs so dear the hearts of those who run the Nanny State.

The Kennedy Brothers in their informative book The South Was Right (Pelican Publishing) noted the political gyrations of Thaddeus Stevens and his revolutionary cohorts. They said: “To secure enactment of the amendment, the Northern Congress had to accomplish the following: Declare the Southern states outside of the erstwhile indivisible Union. Deny majority rule in the Southern States by the disenfranchisement of large numbers of the White population. Require the Southern States to ratify the amendment as the price of getting back into the Union from which heretofore they had been denied the right to secede.”

House of mirrors

And they continued: “The third point could be turned into a Yankee brain teaser. The North, in 1866, removed the Southern States from the Union. This was the same North that in 1861 refused to allow the South to secede from the Union. This same North now declared the Southern States to be non-States. To get back into the Union (that originally the South did not want to be part of anyway, and from which it had previously been denied the right to secede) it was required to perform the function of a State in that Union, while still officially no longer part of that Union, by ratifying an amendment that previously as States in the Union it had legally rejected! Words alone fail to meet the challenge of such pure Yankee logic.” It almost makes you wonder what brand of revolutionary weed Stevens and his pals had been smoking!

Some students of history have, upon reflection, observed that the adoption of the 14th Amendment opened the door for the adoption of the 17th Amendment, the direct election of Senators by “popular” vote. One can, almost in overview, see an evolutionary process in this, whereby we first lose our State citizenship, then eventually, even national citizenship, until we all finally become “citizens of the world” much like Karl Marx’s “workers of the world.” Do you suppose there’s any connection?

So Thaddeus Stevens was a moving force in favor of helping to bury the concept of State citizenship in favor of national citizenship. There may be some naive souls who would believe that Stevens didn’t really know what he was doing. I, however, have a suspicious mind. Thaddeus Stevens, the professional South-hater, knew exactly what he was doing!

Unseen truth in plain sight

Stevens and his crowd were apostate revolutionaries of the first order. Their main intent was to alter the American system of government, keeping the forms to fool the uninitiated, but changing the substance. Unfortunately, their revolution, with the help of socialists in the Republican Party, succeeded and we today live with the results of that, most of us not even realizing it thanks to the mis-education we received in public schools. Whatever vestiges of what the Founding Fathers left to us died with the Southern loss of the War of Northern Aggression – the Marxist/Lincolnist Revolution of 1861. Those who fail to realize this have missed the boat.

We hear so much talk today from sincere and patriotic people who have not been on the firing line long enough to know the difference. They shout about “taking America back.” Back to what??? What most of them fail to realize is that what they want to take it back to is what they grew up with – their version of the “good old days.” What they don’t grasp is that they grew up after the Marxist/Lincolnist Revolution had already been accomplished. They are 100 years too late!

Court of Inquisition

When Stevens introduced the 14th Amendment, some of the more cautious Republicans threatened to remove his third section of it, dealing with the ineligibility of former Confederate leaders to run for Congress until at least 1876. Stevens – through adroit political maneuvering, at which he was a past master – put together a coalition of radical Republicans and Democrats to prevent that change. He pled with them to retain that third section. His vindictive anti-Southern mindset clearly showed as he pleaded: “It is too lenient for my hard heart. Not only to 1870, but to 18070, every rebel who shed the blood of loyal men should be prevented from exercising any power in this government.” Stevens was a truly shining example of abolitionist charity and forgiveness! Had Stevens been willing to shape his attitude to conform to Biblical standards the country organizations.

Hamas and Islamic Jihad are Palestinian organizations fighting for independence. True, they have used terrorist tactics, just as the Jewish organizations – the Stern Gang and the Irgun – did when fighting the British occupation of Palestine. But their target is the Israeli occupation, not us.

Hezbollah is a Lebanese organization that also used terrorist tactics, even against Americans in Lebanon when we helped Israel with its occupation of Lebanon. But, there again, its quarrel was strictly with Israel.

The Israeli lobby has been so successful labeling any criticism of Israel, no matter how justified, as anti-Semitic that most Americans stick their heads in the sand. American politicians and the media seem to be terrified by the Israeli lobby, which says more about their cowardice than the power of the lobby itself.

We have one, and only one, legitimate interest in the Middle East: buying the oil that everybody who has it wants to sell. It doesn’t matter if we buy it from a dictator – we bought plenty from Saddam – or a democratic government, nor whether the seller likes or hates Israel.

This whole mess is a result of America’s involvement with Israel. It’s a dangerous and unhealthy state of affairs that will not be cured until Americans find the courage to have an open and honest debate about our foreign policy in the Middle East.

might have been better off. No need to worry, though, Stevens was not about to go there.

Long after Stevens’ death, an old political opponent, Jeremiah S. Black, noted of him that: “When he died he was unequaled in this country as a lawyer. He said the smartest things ever said. But his mind, as far as his sense of obligation to God was concerned, was a howling wilderness.” So noted Fawn Brodie in her biographical work on Stevens.

Irrational wrath

God stated in both Deuteronomy 32:35 and Romans 12:19 that vengeance belongs to Him, that man is only to execute that which God entrusts to him, and he is to leave vengeance to God. Stevens, in the manner of most true revolutionaries and apostates, ignored this, as he did most of the rest of Scripture. With his abolitionist mindset, and for his own twisted reasons, he sought vengeance on all Whites in the South, the vast majority of whom had never done him any harm. His twisted hatred would not allow him to do anything else. Suffice it to say that Thaddeus Stevens is not someone you want your children to emulate.

The 14th Amendment, in its final form, dealt with four different areas. In the first, it made the radical departure of redefining citizenship as a national rather than a State matter. This was an important first step toward making the States mere vassals to the federal deity in Washington. The second section reduced representation in Southern States to basis of the voting population only. The third section excluded Confederate leaders from office indefinitely, barring a two-thirds vote by Congress. The fourth section repudiated the Confederate debt and upheld the Union’s national debt.

So where are we?

Attempting to explain all the implications of this radical amendment would take more space than we have here. Hopefully, these brief comments will give some others the incentive to dig into the 14th Amendment, as well as the 13th and 15th Amendments to see what implications these hold for us that we have not been informed about, especially in regard to our modern “civil rights” movement.

USS Liberty attack denied by a pack of cowards Part 3

James E. Akins, a career foreign service officer, was U.S. ambassador to Saudi Arabia before retiring in 1976. He lives in Washington, DC, serves as a consultant on energy matters and travels frequently to the Middle East, Europe and Asia. This article was adapted from a talk given by Ambassador Akins at the Center for Policy Analysis on Palestine in Washington, DC.

Why is what happened on June 8, 1967, “news”? Because it’s taboo.

By James E. Akins
Washington Report On Middle East Affairs

Pollard was a low-ranking official of the Navy Department with a very high security clearance. He was given names and numbers of documents by one or more other Israeli agents in the Defense Department. He then withdrew these documents from the files and took them to an Israeli safe house where they were copied. He then returned the documents to the files the next working day. Literally thousands of documents were taken, most of which had little if anything to do with Israel.

The case was and is most disturbing for several reasons: 1) the damage was so great because Israel sold or traded the information to hostile powers, making it possible for them to destroy all American intelligence networks throughout the Soviet bloc. Many U. S. informants were caught and executed; 2) Israel has never returned the documents Pollard stole in spite of promising to do so; and 3) Pollard has never identified those who tasked him with acquiring specific documents. That Pollard has never shown any remorse is natural; he believes he served his “true homeland” well.

Israel initially claimed this was a “rogue operation” and that the Israeli government knew nothing about it. Not one member of the American intelligence community believed this, but the U. S. government decided not to make an issue of it. This Israeli charade has subsequently been abandoned and the last Israeli prime minister used all of his power to get Pollard released on the grounds that he “has suffered enough already.”

Power plays

Netanyahu failed largely because he had bragged that the price President Bill Clinton agreed to pay for Israel’s signing the Wye agreement was the release of Pollard. I am not sure that Clinton actually made such a promise, but when the word leaked that Pollard might soon be freed, George Tenet, head of the CIA, let it be known that he would resign if this were done. Clinton then said he had agreed only to “examine the question again.”

As a matter of interest, any Americans who contribute to the Fund to Free Pollard may deduct such contributions from their U. S. income taxes [See Ford, page 16]... But the main point Israel’s supporters make is that “Israel is our only friend in the Middle East.” In view of the Liberty and Jonathan Pollard matters, one wonders how we can distinguish our “friends” from our “enemies.”

The international legality of Israel was established when the United Nations voted in 1947 to partition Palestine into a Jewish State with about 53 percent of the land and an Arab State with about 47 percent. The Arabs at the time were about two-thirds of the population, and they understandably rejected the partition plan. When the truce was finally reached in 1948 Israel controlled 78 percent and the 22 percent left to the Arabs was annexed to the Kingdom of Jordan.

From then on Israel has shown an extraordinary ability to defy the U. N. From 1947 to 1967 it refused to comply with 32 resolutions. Between 1967 and 1974 there were another 17. The resolutions called for the internationalization of Jerusalem, for an end to settlements in the territories occupied in 1967, for the return of refugees and for an end to the occupation of southern Lebanon.

All were quite important. And all were ignored. Israeli Prime Minister Levi Eshkol said after the 1967 war that “even if the U. N. votes by 121 to one, we will not withdraw from the territories we have occupied.” Golda Meir added, “If a resolution is not to our liking, so what? After all it’s not a tank firing at you.”

Arabs and other Muslims and many others comment on the asymmetry of our Middle East policy, our double standard. The U. S. vetoes any U. N. resolution including or even implying punitive action against Israel and it tolerates Israeli defiance even of those resolutions with which the U. S. concurs. Iraq defies the Security Council resolution to withdraw from Kuwait and its infrastructure is destroyed. It defies another SC resolution on inspection of suspected military sites and sanctions are imposed for eight years. Some countries, like some of George Orwell’s animals, are more equal than others.

Crucial questions

Finally, let’s face the crucial questions we’d all like answered about the Liberty.

Who knew about the attack on the Liberty and when did they know it? The attack was reported by the ship immediately and the word was certainly on the president’s desk within 15 minutes – probably much less. So he knew. So did Walt Rostow and McGeorge Bundy in the White House. So did Robert McNamara, the secretary of defense. So did a number of senior military men.

Admiral Thomas Moorer, who was not immediately involved, knows men who were and he has spoken strongly about the scandal of the Israeli action and the greater scandal of non-American response. Planes were dispatched from the mid-Mediterranean to the Liberty almost immediately after the attack. Why were they ordered to stop and turn around while the ship was under ferocious attack, and who issued the order?

If the planes had continued they almost certainly could have saved the 34 who were killed and the 110 who were wounded in the second and third Israeli could contribute only $5,000 to a candidate in each election. Fine. A good start. Then, quite suddenly, about 120 independent PACs were formed around the country whose sole raison d’etre was support of Israel. But their names showed no connection to the Middle East, e.g., “Connecticut Good Government PAC.”

(Richard Curtiss, executive editor of Washington Report On Middle East Affairs, wrote a book on these “Stealth PACS.”) Does AIPAC coordinate the activities of these PACs? What a shocking question! That would be illegal!

What AIPAC does is supply these PACs with information on voting records and statements of candidates about the Middle East, and which candidates, or their pro-Israel opponents, need funding. If the individual PAC then feels a candidate is sufficiently pro-Israel it supports him; if he is seen to be anti-Israel, the support goes to his opponent.

With a single PAC there isn’t much of a problem; you can’t buy a congressman for $5,000 – well, not a good one. But with 100 PACs each giving $5,000, that’s $500,000 and is quite another story.

I’m in a rather small minority in believing that the power and the invincibility of AIPAC are more myth than reality. But I must admit that there isn’t much difference. If people and members of Congress believe the myth, then the myth has become reality.

The A-pack mystique

About 20 years ago Sen. J. William Fulbright asked me to have lunch with him and Sen. Hugh Scott, the Senate minority leader. We talked about the Middle East and at the end of the lunch Fulbright asked his colleague what he had concluded. “No doubt about it, Ambassador Akins is right,” Senator Scott said. “But if you quote me publicly I’ll say you’re a goddam liar.”

You get the same reaction today when you talk with most congresspeople. “Sure, you’ve got a point; you’re probably right. But what can I do? Look at what happened to Senator Fulbright, Senator [Charles] Percy and Congressman [Paul] Findley.” All three had been targeted by AIPAC for defeat. And defeated they all were.

But each case is flawed; none is a clear AIPAC victory. Fulbright himself told me that he was out of touch with Arkansas; he was interested primarily in foreign policy and few in his home State shared this passion. “And Dale Bumpers (his primary election opponent) was young, attractive, popular and had been an excellent governor. I would have lost the election even if the Middle East had not existed.”

The case of Percy is different. He was a popular senator from Illinois in 1982 and was chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee. And he favored the sale of Boeing AWAC surveillance planes to Saudi Arabia.

Israel gets its pacifier

And why not? It was a fantastic deal for the U. S. The Saudis paid 10 times as much for the planes as the shah of Iran had paid; they would be manned, at least initially, by Americans and the information they recovered would be processed in Kansas City. But Israel opposed the sale of anything which might give any Arab country parity with Israel, and its lobby in Washington went all out to block the sale. The sale went through, but Israel then came to the United States with a demand for even more military assistance, and we gave it immediately.

As for Percy, he would be destroyed. A millionaire real estate developer from Los Angeles (that’s in California, not Illinois) put hundreds of thousands of dollars into the campaign to defeat him. Percy was advised by many to stand up to the attacks, to say he would take no action which would harm Israel but if Israeli and American interests came into conflict the (See “Some stick,” next page)

American ones would take precedence. He was running for the Senate, after all, not for the Israeli Knesset.

Percy did not take the advice; in fact he asked rather pitifully, “Why are they doing this? I’m the best friend of Israel in the Senate.” AIPAC decided to finish him off, and others who might have supported his actions decided he was a wimp.

Paul Findley’s case is different, too. He was a Republican congressman from down-state Illinois. After the 1980 census Illinois lost a seat and Findley’s district was redrawn, it lost a traditionally Republican area and gained a large number of Democratic voters. It’s not clear how much his Middle East stand had to do with the manner in which his State’s reapportionment was carried out. But, from the time a Republican congressman was given an overwhelmingly Democratic constituency, the work of dozens of volunteers AIPAC sent from all parts of the country to work for his opponent was greatly enhanced.

So, was the role of AIPAC crucial? Perhaps, but I advise congressmen and others to look at the case of the late Sen. John Chafee of Rhode Island. AIPAC singled him out for defeat in 1988; he did not back down or even acknowledge the AIPAC campaign. He won with a bigger majority than he had six years earlier, and he won again in 1994. Nor did he change his voting patterns prior to his death in October 1999. (To be continued)

Charleston recovers Fort Sumter from her former allies

Those who controlled the money, the media and the military, in that same order parlayed their designs into a tragically unnecessary war.

It was a foreign policy not unlike many another aberrant idea pursued by federal administrations ever since that first major war against a country just minding its own business. Lincoln would use for his excuse Southron “terrorists.” For these had sent a warning shot across Fort Sumter’s bow, the hint that he should stop threatening and heed the new Southern nation’s “Yankee, go home.”

A plan to exploit the South

Did South Carolina not understand Abe Lincoln’s resolve? Frank Roosevelt and George Bush, aiming to control the money, media and military worldwide even if that required shutting down State legislatures, recalcitrant editors and holohoax deniers, would eventually owe much to the Lincoln regime’s Reconstruction experiments.

Sic semper tyrannis. As those New York

monied interests saw great indications of returns for their investments in the man, no matter the draft resisters and editors he had to arrest, they gave Lincoln good press and a tidied-up casus belli which survives to this day in public indoctrination facilities called schools, televised entertainment and “news” from the war fronts.

Timely defense measure

Throughout March of 1861 Confederate authorities had sought to get the occupiers out of Fort Sumter peacefully. However, once the Lincoln administration decided to hang onto all its military outposts in the South and wouldn’t hand over the fort to this new nation, C.S.A. President Jefferson Davis took action. He hoped that laying Fort Sumter under blockade would drive the northerners out of our country and help South Carolina secede to the Confederate States of America. This maneuver couldn’t be delayed until reinforcements arrived at the garrison. Davis and his cabinet decided to dispatch General Beauregard to siege Fort Sumter.

Beauregard was faced with a difficult situation. General Anderson, commanding Fort Sumter, had been his instructor at West Point. Before starting the shelling, Beauregard sent a letter formally inviting surrender of the fort. Anderson regretfully denied this offer and the bombardment commenced; on April 12th at 4:30 AM it began with heavy cannon. Seeing much of his ammunition afire and supplies running low, General Anderson surrendered the next day, and left the fort on April 14th. No casualties resulted from the bombardment, but one Union soldier was killed during the surrendering ceremony when a cannon backfired. This fort had not occupied a strategic location, so here was no decisive battle. “But it did start what was to be the United States’ worst war, the bloodiest in American history,” those “victors” inform us even today, “solely for the preservation of slavery.” Nothing so quickly enslaves an innocent child like that Big Lie!

From a legal standpoint, the war began when Lincoln called out the militiamen and ordered the Union navy to blockade all

Rumors of Iraq’s and Dixie’s demise greatly exaggerated

Why blame the lowly soldier who believes his captain received good intelligence, verified by Rothschild approved news media, that it’ll be a cakewalk? Surely those “rebels” will break and run, and a People’s Democratic Republic then spring up strewing his path with flowers.

On July 21, 1861, the First Battle of Bull Run occurred at a stream near Manassas, Virginia. It is also called First Manassas. This was the initial major conflict in Abe Lincoln’s War of Northern Aggression. His Union army of 37,000 troops under General Irvin McDowell engaged 35,000 Confederate troops under Generals P. G. T. Beauregard and Joseph Johnston. Reports by the eventual “victors” have it that “The Union army, under pressure to crush the rebellion in the South, marched towards Richmond, but met the Confederate forces coming north from Manassas, a Southern base.

“At the beginning of the five hour battle the Union soldiers had the Confederates on the retreat, except for one brigade commanded by General Jackson. Due to Jackson’s ability to hold his ground and his stubbornness, the men saw him similar to a stone wall, hence the nickname ‘Stonewall’ Jackson. Thanks to Jackson the Confederates were able to hold out until General Johnston showed up with 9,000 reinforcements to help Beauregard near Henry House Hill. The arrival changed the course of the battle and soon the Union soldiers were fleeing back to Washington. However, because of the disorganization of Beauregard’s army, they could not pursue McDowell any further.

“The battle proved that this was not going to be a one sided war for either side, as was predicted. The casualties soared to 2,900 killed, wounded, captured, or missing for McDowell’s army and 2,000 for Beauregard’s. The battle spurred a sense of victory in the South, pushing them on, and in the North a feeling for revenge.”

Northerners who had expected a swift victory were convinced otherwise that day, as shown in the drawing below at left by Illustrated London News special artist Frank Vizetelly. Northern illustrated newspapers regularly dispatched such “special artists” to cover the war. These sketches, engraved on wood blocks and published in Harper’s Weekly, Frank Leslie’s Illustrated Newspaper and other periodicals, were the North’s major source of war imagery. A few short-lived Southern illustrated papers appeared, but it was the Illustrated London News – which the regime could hardly censor – that most actively portrayed the Confederate point of view. Somehow the truth will always out.

RUINS OF STONE BRIDGE, BULL RUN

Yankees find no Southern hospitality in the Shenandoah

Jackson’s Valley Campaign
March-June, 1862

The Confederate army was led by a host of well-trained generals, one of the greatest being “Stonewall” Jackson, who, at the time of Johnston’s failed offensive at Fair Oaks, was in command of his troops in the Shenandoah Valley. Their number rounded out to about 16,000, a mere one-third the strength of the invading forces he would be defending against. Jackson’s main purpose in the Valley was to stall the Union troops there as long as possible and prevent them from ever reaching McClellan. He did just that.

Jackson’s first valley engagement came at Kernstown, where with only 3,000 men he attacked some 9,000 Yanks under Major

General Nathaniel Banks. The attackers were driven off with little trouble, but this did serve his purpose of stalling the Union troops and therefore delaying them from getting to McClellan. With Banks’ victory, Lincoln felt the destruction of Jackson’s army would be a simple matter so he sent in McDowell’s troops from the east. That was a poor decision, however. If McDowell were to catch up with Jackson, he would have to undertake a considerably longer march over much poorer roads. Second, the movement of McDowell’s troops kept them from getting to McClellan, and that was precisely what Jackson wanted. In less than three months Jackson had won five out of six battles and sent 60,000 troops on a chase around the valley.

Point Lookout prison camp for Confederate soldiers

By Elaine Thorp
timesexaminer.com

Point Lookout, the Union POW camp for Confederate soldiers established after the Battle of Gettysburg, was open from August 1863 until June 1865. It is located along the coast of Maryland only five feet above sea level on approximately 30 acres of flat land. The largest Union POW camp and one of the most secure, surrounded on three sides by water from the Chesapeake Bay and the Potomac River, it kept Union cannons pointed from Fort Lincoln at the Confederate prisoners and had Union gun ships anchored in nearby waters. Only an estimated fifty escape attempts proved successful.

Serene isolation

Prior to the War Between the States, Point Lookout had been a fashionable resort hotel and summer bathing place with over 100 cottages where the elite spent their leisure time. In 1862 with the building of additional facilities, it became a Union military hospital and prison for Maryland citizens who sympathized with the South. Also serving as a supply depot for the Army of the Potomac, in August, 1863, it was converted into a prison for Confederate soldiers with a capacity of 10,000.

During the two-year span, approximately 52,000 Confederate prisoners would pass through its gates. Although an estimated 14,000 Confederates died at Point Lookout, the Federal government can only account for nearly 3,384 prisoners who are buried at the camp. The graves of these brave men have been moved twice from their original location. They now rest in a mass grave under an 85-foot towering obelisk erected by the Federal government. This was the first monument to Confederate soldiers. The names of those men accounted for so far are listed on a bronze tablet at the bottom of the monument.

Proto Guantanamo

There were no trees or shrubs, only open, sandy ground when prisoners first began arriving in August 1863. No buildings to shelter the prisoners, only torn, moth-eaten and rotten tents with one blanket per sixteen men providing no real protection when the ground froze solid in winter and flooded during the summer, prisoners slept on the cold ground with nothing beneath to protect them. Confederate prisoners were not allowed any clothing, blankets, shoes, etc., from home; everything sent to them was confiscated by the guards.

Their rations consisted of a half pint of coffee or slop water as breakfast and for dinner a half pint of greasy water called soup, with perhaps a small, three to four ounce piece of meat. Sometimes they got eight ounces of bread a day. Water at the camp was contaminated with sulphur, iron and other chemicals. It smelled terrible and had a yellowish color. Clothes washed in this water turned black and yellow. Food and water provided to the Confederate prisoners was barely enough to sustain life.

Certified cruel and unusual

The U. S. Federal Board of Surgeons condemned the water in this camp due to its poisonous composition. Many deaths were caused solely from scanty, unhealthy food and the poisonous water; this from a government that had plenty of both. The guards stationed at Point Lookout wrote home about how lucky they were to be at the camp. They told of how they had warm and pleasant housing, more than enough good food, warm clothing, blankets and bunks, as well as good medical care.

The hunger experienced by Confederate prisoners there is impossible to describe. Grown men would lie in their tents and cry like babies from hunger pangs and severe cold. They were forced to go to bed early and not allowed to walk around outside the overcrowded tents trying and stay warm.

The health of those prisoners began to fail rapidly. The prison hospital was ever overcrowded with men suffering from all kinds of fever, smallpox and epidemics. Every tent contained men suffering from some type of illness because the hospital could not accommodate them all. Their thin blankets gave little protection from the ground and they were entirely destitute of proper nourishment. All kinds of diseases continued spreading at an alarming rate. Add to this their brutal and cruel treatment at the hands of the guards, so that despair and depression became the norm for all of those prisoners. If anyone moaned in his sleep or from pain, guards would often fire their guns into tents, sometimes killing one or more of the prisoners.

Cynical comparison

It was stated after the war that there had been suffering in all POW camps, North and South. But, in the more humane South, everything possible by a government that had no more resources was done to relieve prison suffering, a situation unlike that of the well-provided Northern administration. Yankee prisoners and Confederate guards in Southern prisons were in the same boat; nobody had enough food, clothing, blankets or medical care. Rail lines between North and South had been cut, and the Yankees would not allow any provisions through to help out their own soldiers. Great Britain, aware of this sad treatment of Confederate prisoners at Point Lookout, sent a ship with supplies for 8,000 Southern prisoners, but the ship was not allowed to dock by the Federal government. Often, Federal prisons withheld food and supplies when hearing that Northern troops in Southern prisons were not getting enough food, clothing or medical care, even though the South could do nothing more for their charges because Northern troops would not let such relief pass though the lines.

In January 1865, the U. S. Congress passed Resolution 97 on the treatment of Confederate prisoners. “Rebel prisoners in our hands are to be subjected to a treatment finding its parallels only in the conduct of savage tribes and resulting in the death of multitudes by the slow, but designed process of starvation and by mortal diseases occasioned by insufficient and unhealthy food, as well as exposure of their persons to the inclemency of the weather.” Legal murder was accepted by the victorious North, while the South was tried and convicted of the mistreatment of Northern troops. The South tried many times to get the North to agree to a prisoner exchange, but the North always refused. Toward the end of the war, when conditions became desperate, Northern prisoners were sent to Washington to plead the case of their comrades, as the South could no longer care for them, but they too were refused.

Truth will out

A Yankee soldier from the 42nd NY Infantry who was held at Andersonville refuted the Federal government’s charge that Southerners tried to kill off Yankee prisoners intentionally. Swearing that they did everything in their power to sustain their Federal prisoners, he charged the Federal government with abandoning their own brave men in the hour of their cruelest need. They fought for the Union and their own government would not reach out a hand to save them. He accused them of

A State of spies

By Gregory Kay
gregmkay@yahoo.com

Montani semper liberi. “Mountaineers are always free!” So goes West Virginia’s official motto, anyway, although all that increasingly amounts to is fine-sounding words. The State Government, in another massive suck-up to Washington, DC, has turned it from the Mountain State into a state of paranoia where, for the price of a smart phone, anyone can become a spy on his neighbors.

Democratic Governor Earl Ray Tomblin, together with the West Virginia Division of Homeland Security, has announced a new app for the increasingly ubiquitous smart phones that allows anybody possessing one to become an instant low-rent James Bond, at least in his own mind and without the actual abilities and class of the fictional British agent. All one has to do is snap a photo with the phone, imprinting the image file, time, date and GPS coordinates; then the phone’s owner can add any notes of explanation desired, click a button and send it. You can even do it anonymously – so they say; and, if you really believe that,

The other side of the mountain

I’ve got a used car for sale – reporting your neighbor or anyone else you don’t like to the West Virginia Intelligence Fusion center, a division of the WVDHS, becoming an agent between the Federal Department of Homeland Security and the State’s law enforcement for further investigation with the mere press of a button.

What’s emerging

Consider the ramifications. With the tip of your little finger, you might bring that noisy neighbor, cheating boyfriend or your annoying co-worker to the attention not only of an often notoriously heavy-handed State Police force, but also to a Federal goon-squad, and without ever having your name involved. Your targets don’t even have to be misbehaving; just submit an innocuous photo of them doing anything, loading the trunk of their car or digging in the yard, and you can get them investigated for possible terrorism by an all-powerful agency notorious for ignoring little niceties like law and the Constitution. You might even get them put on the terrorist watch list, with all the possibilities that entails.

trying to shift the blame to the South, but placed that responsibility right where it belonged, on the shoulders of the Northern government. After the war, it was proven; Northern guards and camp commanders had made millions by pilfering clothing, supplies and other necessities of life.

Conditions were so bad, that in July, 1864, Gen. Robert E. Lee drew up a plan by which the Confederate infantry and cavalry under Gen. Jubal Early would advance toward Point Lookout, while the Confederate Navy under the command of John T. Wood, with 800 volunteers, would sail from Wilmington, North Carolina, and hook up with Early’s cavalry force at Point Lookout in a bid to free some 15,000 Confederate prisoners. Unfortunately, the plan was dropped by President Jefferson Davis because information regarding the plan became known to Union authorities.

The abuse of Confederate prisoners during that war was heinous enough, but the insults to their memory and descendants even until today has been unforgivable.

While approximately 52,000 prisoners were held at Point Lookout, with around 14,000 having died there, the Federal government will merely admit about 3,500 perished at the camp and allows no more names on the monument at the government park in Maryland. As the descendants have come to the park each year for a memorial service, the Veterans Affairs officials want to see and approve every word in advance of the programs that are to be presented. In 1998, the Federal government even took down the Confederate flag that had flown over the graves of these men – the very flag for which they all fought and died.

In 2003, a group of their descendants purchased a plot of land adjacent to the park and began building a Confederate Memorial Park there. Officially dedicated in 2005, its progress continues to make this a place to commemorate, remember and honor all those prisoners of Point Lookout. There now exists a monument listing all known prisoners of the camp, both those who died and the survivors. A flag from every State of the Confederacy now flies daily over the park, also a Confederate battle flag which flies there 24/7, 365 days a year in honor of these brave soldiers of the South who suffered so much in death, but are now remembered and honored every day by their descendants and the people of the South.

Do the witch trials of the 16th century come to mind, where to be accused was a presumption of guilt?

Lest anyone think this idea actually fights terrorism, I’m forced to respond with: “What terrorism?” West Virginia has never suffered a terrorist attack, and has never, in State or Federal Courts, had a conviction for one; the closest we’ve ever come was a Federal informant pretending to be an Islamic terrorist who entrapped the local militia by getting them to give him information. There is no terrorism here, and never was. This is nothing more or less than the installation of a true surveillance society in a small, rural State, and it’s being done on a budget. In West Virginia, Big Brother is not watching you; He’s having a whole bunch of little brothers do it for him!

Still, lest you get complacent about this just being a “West Virginia thing,” at least one other state – Kentucky – is doing it too; in fact, they did it first. It also sits on West Virginia’s southeastern border, and, like the Mountain State, the Bluegrass State is also pretty much terrorist free.

I think I see a pattern here...

Truth always the first casualty of war

strength and uniqueness of our Constitutional Republic, I began to question both assumptions.

The U. S. Constitution, I came to believe, was a contract – a contract between various States and the Federal government they created. Note that the Constitution had to be approved by the States, not a majority of the citizens. There was no “majority rule” here, no popular vote taken.

But this raises the question, if it was necessary for the States to adopt the Constitution, why wouldn’t it be legal for some of those States to rescind that vote, especially if they felt the contract had been broken? More and more, I found myself thinking that the South was legally and morally right in declaring its independence. And the North, by invading those States and waging war on them, was wrong.

Abe honest?

And what a terrible war it was. By the time it was over, nearly 625,000 soldiers (and another 75,000 or so women, children and elderly civilians) were dead – more American servicemen than were killed in World War I, World War II, the Korean War and Vietnam War combined. Fully one-fourth of the draft-age White population of the South was dead.

The devastation in the former States of the Confederacy is hard to imagine. Sherman’s march from Atlanta to Savannah is notorious for its savagery. But he was far from the only Northern officer ordering his troops to lay waste to Southern farms, fields and plantations. Union troops routinely destroyed crops, sacked homes and even stabled their horses in Southern churches.

As H. W. Crocker III puts it in The Politically Incorrect Guide to the Civil War (Regnery Publishing, 2008), “If abiding by the law of a free republic and fighting a defensive war solely against armed combatants be flaws, the South had them and the North did not. Lincoln ignored the law, the Constitution, and the Supreme Court when it suited him. His armies waged war on the farms, livelihoods and people of the South, not just against their armies.”

Of all the big lies about the War Between the States, the biggest of all may be that it was necessary to end slavery.

The truth is that many illustrious Southerners, including Jefferson Davis and Robert E. Lee, recognized that slavery had to come to an end. But it should not come by force of arms, they felt; not at the point of a gun, but rather through the free consent of the owners, with the proper preparation of the slaves. To get them ready for their own freedom, for example, Lee’s wife insisted the family’s slaves be taught to read and write, and the women how to sew.

Perfidious Nigerion

Despite what most of us have been taught, Lincoln’s Emancipation Proclamation did not free the slaves. It wasn’t a law, but an edict. It specifically exempted the Border States and any parts of the South that were already under the control of Federal forces. It applied only to areas that were still in rebellion. So the Proclamation, of and by itself, did not free a single slave.

What it did, however, was change the nature of the conflict. Now the war was no longer about restoring the Union or preventing Southern independence. Now it was about the morality, and the legality, of slavery. The Emancipation Proclamation did not make the war more popular in the North, but it did end the possibility of other countries, especially France and Britain, from coming to the aid of the South. They might have been willing to assist Southern independence; but support a war in favor of slavery? Never.

As Crocker notes, “In Southern eyes, the Emancipation Proclamation was the ultimate in Yankee perfidy – an attempt to incite slave uprisings against Confederate women and children.”

Then he notes, “Happily, while the proclamation did encourage slaves to seek their freedom, there were no slave uprisings, no murders of women and children –

EDITOR’S NOTE

Chip Wood understands Lincoln’s Emancipation Proclamation affected only the States “still in rebellion,” but he overlooks to acknowledge that our government, the Confederate States of America, existed no less in law and fact than did his United States. When Jefferson Finis Davis held office as President of a confederated republic, if only as a “rebel,” then what about today’s “elected” U. S. Presidents?

GOP candidate: Holocaust “blackest lie” in history

presstv.ir

It’s the blackest lie in history. Millions of dollars are being made by Jews telling this tale of woe and misfortune in books, movies, plays and TV.

Thus speaks Republican congressional hopeful Arthur Jones.

This U. S. Republican congressional hopeful has emphasized “the holocaust never happened,” and says that such a scam amounts to “the blackest lie in history.”

Arthur Jones, who is challenging Democrat Dan Lipinski in Illinois’ 3rd Congressional District, noted that the claim of killing millions of Jews and other people by Nazis during World War II amounts to “nothing more than an international extortion racket by the Jews,” The Huffington Post reported.

Dares to speak the truth

“It’s the blackest lie in history. Millions of dollars are being made by Jews telling this tale of woe and misfortune in books, movies, plays and TV,” he said

“The more survivors, the more lies that are told,” the 64-year-old candidate said.

Jones hoped to win the Republican primary nomination and move on to challenge Democrat Dan Lipinski next November.

He also questioned Lipinski’s strange affiliation with the powerful pro-Israeli lobby group in the U. S. – American Israel

Public Affairs Committee (AIPAC).

Jones underlined that the pro-Israeli lobby “was bragging on their website” on how Lipinski is “spearheading an effort in the U. S. House of Representatives with a Jewish Congressman from Virginia named Frank Wolf to get tough with Iran, closing off any oil exports to China that could lead to World War III.”

Jones, a Vietnam War veteran, also compared current conditions in the U. S. to the situation in Germany following the end of World War I and insisted that “our country is falling apart economically, politically, culturally, militarily.”

“We are going down,” he noted angrily.

Government of lapdogs

“These war-mongering fools in congress like [Republican presidential candidates] Rick Santorum and Newt Gingrich and Mitt Romney – we can’t let Iran have one nuclear weapon but we let Israel have all the nuclear weapons they want,” Jones said. “This is ridiculous.”

A little good news

By Tony DuPree 120528

7819 NW 228 St, Raiford, FL 32026

The U. S. Census Bureau has recently released figures that contain a little good news: Due to the economic slowdown and a stricter enforcement policy post-9/11, fewer illegals are entering the U. S. The Bureau also pushed back its estimate of when Whites will become a minority from 2042 to 2050. White children having been projected to become a minority in 2023, that has also been revised to 2031.

Devil’s agenda

Now consider the following quote by British Communist speaker and writer Israel Cohen to understand part of the plan to genocide the White-Germanic race: “We must realize that our party’s most powerful weapon is racial tension. By pounding into the consciousness of the dark races that for centuries they have been oppressed by the Whites, we can mold them to the program of the Communist party. In America, we will aim for subtle victory. While inflaming the Negro minority against the Whites, we will endeavor to instill in the Whites a guilt complex for their exploitation of the Negroes. We will aid the Negroes to rise in prominence in every walk of life, in the professions and in the world of sports and entertainment. With this prestige the Negro which might say something good about Southerners too, both White and Black.”

Lincoln, more than any other President who came before him, changed the very nature of our government. There would never again be as many limitations on the powers of the Federal government. And just as tragic, the concept of States’ rights suffered a blow from which it has never recovered.

I’m told that more than 14,000 books have been written about Lincoln. Most, of course, are incredibly adulatory. The few that attempt to balance the scales are virtually ignored. While it may not be true that might makes right, it is definitely true that the winners write the history books.

The other Lincoln

If you’re open-minded enough to consider another point of view, let me recommend two books by Thomas J. DiLorenzo to you: The Real Lincoln and Lincoln Unmasked. In these two books he presents a vastly different view of Abraham Lincoln than you’ve heard before, I promise.

Both are available at Amazon.com. (What isn’t?) Also, do yourself a favor and go to the website of the Ludwig von Mises Institute, where DiLorenzo serves as a senior fellow. You’ll find an extensive selection of articles, essays, and yes, books you can order that are way out of the academic mainstream.

So there you have this contrarian’s view of Abraham Lincoln. I’m eager to hear what some of you think – especially the sons and daughters of the South, who, I suspect, were raised with a somewhat different slant than I.

Until next time, keep some powder dry.

My comment, as pastor and leader of Florida State CJCC: I do have an extreme guilt complex! I have a guilt complex that I couldn’t be with my elderly Aunt Betty Dunn when she was robbed, carjacked and had her head run over, a Black savage killing her with her own car while she was on vacation and had stopped for food in Milwaukee in 1998. Or that I couldn’t be there the night my sister-in-law Jeannie McCart was robbed, raped, beaten, carjacked and run over three times with her own truck by a Black savage in Andalusia, Alabama, in 2000. Oh, she survived, but had to have a leg amputated due to the truck tires spinning over her petite, White naked body three times! The Black savage was out on bond for having sodomized a six-year-old boy and a 65-year-old lady at the time he destroyed Jeanie.

I have been reading about a rash of Communist, Black-savage-loving judges and prosecutors committing suicide. Now that is a little good news!

Judeo-Inquisition’s notorious Paragraph 130 challenged

This investigative journalist is again sentenced to five months in prison under § 130 of the German Penal Code.

By Günter Deckert
guenter.deckert@gmx.de

My “crime” this time... I had made it possible for Mattogno’s Auschwitz – The First Gassings (Italian publication 1992, English version 2002) to finally appear in German as well (2007).

Though most of the text in question had already been translated by others, certain pages in both English and Italian had been left out. I finished the translation, did it over and tried to put the whole text into normal German. My co-operation toward that German version is to be found on page 2 with the statement that I do not share the statements and conclusions of the author.¹

Nevertheless, the political police (five of them) “raided” my home almost four years ago; my 12th “special visit”! They seized my PC as well as two copies of the Mattogno book, one being my author’s copy, the other received from a German woman living in England who complained of its many misprints due to the fact that the Englishman typesetting it was without any knowledge of German. Months later I got my PC back, broken...

The action against me had been ordered by Mannheim prosecutor Grossmann after the Bundesamt für Verfassungsschutz, i.e., Germany’s “Central Office for Protecting the Constitution,” obtained a copy thereof. Attention! What we have in Germany is only a so-called Basic Law forced upon us by the WWII victors whose instigators are still in charge here after sixty-seven years! We, the German People, have never voted on nor approved that decree forbidding any investigation whatsoever of the holohoax.

In summer 2009 the accusation was accepted by the Amtsgericht (county court) of Weinheim, my home town. I arrived without a lawyer because not necessary. As I only wanted to see what the single sitting judge “made” out of the accusation, I did not bring in a lot of paper work. Thus the trial was over in one day. I got four months on probation (for three years) plus a fine of 600 Euros, and had to pay court costs.

Prosecutor Grossmann, who wanted six months prison for me, now could go at my appeal, as this was the term of Mannheim District Court (Landgericht Mannheim), a 1945 Nürnberg all over again for a lot of German revisionists.² A minor court (Kleine Strafkammer) consisting of one professional judge named Roos as president plus two jurors about my age is the rule if you start with a county court; therefore you are not forced to have a lawyer.

The Mannheim trial started November 14th and finished on February 2, 2012. It resulted in those five months of prison without probation. The trial took this long a time as I had changed my tactics in order to make the court understand why I was in favor of revisionism. I gave all the reasons and proofs still possible to be brought forward before a court without being accused again.

At the beginning it seemed that Judge Roos had doubts about the problem of “publicity” or “distribution” of the book as necessary to sentence a person. But, in the end, he jumped on prosecutor Grossmann’s suggestion that the possibility of coming across the book via the internet fulfilled what § 130 demanded.

1. Lawyers recommended that I include the statement to prevent “the system” from further prosecuting me. They are of no real use when it comes to a § 130 case! You cannot bring in proofs to convince the court, for in so doing another accusation is the result!

2. Zündel, Rudolf, Stolz – I have only three copies (in German) left of the documentation Die Mannheimer Hetzer-Prozesse (§ 130: “Holo....”)(-Leugnung) 2005 - 2009 gegen Ernst Zünde, Germar Rudolf, Sylvia Stolz – 304 pages, some in English taken out of The Barnes Review and The First Freedom, soft cover, $30, shipping included; send money in recommended letter which has proved to be working fine.

Günter Deckert (born at Heidelberg in 1940)

In February, on day 6, I was sentenced to those five months of prison as stated before. At the very end of the session I declared that I will appeal this sentence to the Karlsruhe-based regional district court (Oberlandesgericht). This declaration had to be made within a week! After being sent the written sentence, which is not yet the case, I will have one month to give reasons for my revision. If I am lucky (?), the regional district court will not decide before the end of this year. And if I lose again, there is still the possibility of going to the so-called Bundesverfassungsgericht (Federal Constitutional Court), Karlsruhe.

Reports of the trial, above all the one of day six, were to be found nationwide, none of them naturally objective at all; for, our “democracy,” with its “guaranteed basic rights,” is pure theory; the everyday reality is the other way around.

How Putin will change the world

By Brother Nathanael Kapner

Some talk about a clash of ideas while others talk about a clash of leadership.

But, when it comes to Vladimir Putin, both of these world-changing dynamics converge into one.

And now with his landslide Russian presidential elections victory last month, Vladimir Putin is in a “clashing” mood:

“Thank you everybody... all those who said yes to a great Russia. I asked you once, ‘we will win?’ We have won! And we have demonstrated that nobody can impose anything on us. Nobody and never! But today the people of Russia have demonstrated that such options, such scenarios will never achieve success in our country, never! I have promised you that we would and we have won! Glory to Russia!”

Change is not just a word

Yes, indeed, dear President Putin, my dear Orthodox brother in Christ, you who are reviving the Church and Christianity in Moscow and beyond, Glory to Russia!

And this “glory” can only mean that the Zionist West – whose leadership, rule and policies are under the thrall of Judaic masters – is now facing an opposing voice and a real-time player in the person of Vladimir Putin.

At a round table meeting, held just prior to the March 4th presidential elections, Putin addressed a number of key military experts at the nuclear research city of new game,” says Putin, under his leadership.

“We have more aces up our sleeve that would push our Western colleagues and partners to a more constructive dialog than we have seen before. What do I mean by this? Just a few years ago, as I know, they used to speak of us among their fellow allies as follows: ‘Russia could tinker with its military as much as it wants, we are not the least interested in what’s happening there. All they have is rusted-out junk.’ But this is not true. Ha ha. Today it’s a different game.”

When asked about the neocons’ role in pushing America into wars across the globe, Putin had some choice words about these demagogues and a warning to Israel for participating in its own suicidal, self-destruction.

Armchair warriors

With a touch of Russian sarcasm, Putin remarked that with the neocons, quote, “tightening the screws” on U. S. policy makers, “let them screw away!” Putin said, “They can screw and screw until they screw up.”

Putin then added with a dose of Russian realism: “Yes, they’ve changed regimes in Libya, but what will they do there now?” Continuing, Putin piled it on, quote, “And it’s hard to say what sort of mess they’ll

The headline is not Mr. Deckert’s. If any problem with it, blame me. His five years already spent in lockup for doubting the holohoax are enough! make in Syria. Ultimately, Israel will find itself caught between two fires.”

Regardless of whether it’s Kristol, Kagan, Lieberman, Levin, or their Zionist shill at the State Department, Hillary Clinton, these neocons will “screw up” until – just as Putin predicts – Israel is caught between two fires: Between enraged Muslim nations to its West and enraged Muslim nations to its East.

Finally, Putin nails it... who, like no other leader, has the guts to tell it exactly like it is.

For amidst all the smoke of “dangerous dictators” and “weapons of mass destruction,” Putin appears clearly out of the haze saying he’s not going to “play along.”

“Likewise, it is my opinion, that under the pretext of weapons of mass destruction, at the cost of possibly a new member of the nuclear club, Iran, other kinds of attempts are being made, and different goals are being set – for regime change. I believe our standing in the U. N. Security Council on the Syrian issue speaks of the fact that we don’t intend on playing along with anyone.”

In their faces

My dear fellow truth-lovers:

While the Jewish-controlled Western press would love nothing more than seeing Putin dead or at least disappearing from the face of the earth while it pursues more bloodshed, now targeting Syria and Iran, Russia’s new president simply is not going to go away.

And that spells disaster for Zionist Jewry.

But, for the rest of us, who long for sanity and peacemaking in our international global village, Vladimir Putin’s election and emergence as the world’s foremost leader means hope and healing for a troubled and wounded world.

World War II – how it really started

The following is a good overview and summary of what actually caused WWII. Although this doesn’t broach the Jewish Question, here’s a sound demolition of the pathetic victors’ narrative fed to us about that war. It exonerates Hitler, shows how Jewish-controlled Britain and France had refused countless peace offers from him, how the Poles provoked a German invasion with their belligerence, persecution of the ethnic German minority subjected under Polish rule and refusal to accept Hitler’s modest demands for Danzig’s return to the German Reich. First and foremost, Stalin was moving along to attack Germany and Bolshevize all of Europe, thus vindicating Hitler’s Operation Barbarossa preemptive strike to preserve the continent from that Jewish-Bolshevik onslaught.

“Judea Declares War on Germany! Jews of all the World Unite! Boycott of German Goods! Mass Demonstrations!” – These were all headlines in the Daily Express on March 24, 1933.

“The Israeli people around the world declare economic and financial war against Germany. Fourteen million Jews stand together as one man, to declare war against Germany. The Jewish wholesaler will forsake his firm, the banker his stock exchange, the merchant his commerce and the pauper his pitiful shed in order to join together in a holy war against Hitler’s people.”
– Daily Express, March 24, 1933

“Each of you, Jew and Gentile alike, who has not already enlisted in this sacred war should do so now and here. It is not sufficient that you should buy no goods made in Germany. You must refuse to deal with any merchant or shopkeeper who sells any German-made goods or who patronises German ships or shipping.... we will undermine the Hitler regime and bring the German people to their senses by destroying their export trade on which their very existence depends.” – Samuel Untermyer, in a Radio Broadcast on WABC, New York, August 6, 1933, and reported in the New York Times, August 7, 1933.

Joining with Samuel Untermyer in calling for a war against Germany, Bernard Baruch at the same time was promoting preparations for that planned war.

“I emphasised that the defeat of Germany and Japan and their elimination from world trade would give Britain a tremendous opportunity to swell her foreign commerce in both volume and profit.” – Baruch, The Public Years, by Bernard M. Baruch, p. 347 (New York: Holt, Rinehart and Winston, 1960)

Samuel Untermyer was a Jewish leader and close friend of presidents Wilson and Roosevelt.

Bernard Baruch was a presidential adviser to Wilson, Roosevelt and Truman.

For most of our existence and in line with the Constitution, U. S. currency was issued by Congress interest free.

Today we are paying about a billion dollars each day as interest on “our” debt.

Pretty much every single nation has a central bank either owned, controlled or heavily manipulated by Rothschild.

As of the year 2000, there were only seven or eight countries still without a Rothschild owned or controlled central bank. They were Afghanistan, Iraq, Sudan, Libya, Cuba, North Korea, Iran and Syria.

Then along came (totally coincidental of course) the terror of 9-11 and soon Iraq and Afghanistan had been added to the list, leaving only six countries without a central bank owned by the Rothschild family: the Sudan, Libya, Cuba, North Korea, Iran and Syria.

“We are not denying and are not afraid to confess that this war is our war and that it is waged for the liberation of Jewry... Stronger than all fronts together is our front, that of Jewry. We are not only giving this war our financial support on which the entire war production is based, we are not only providing our full propaganda power which is the moral energy that keeps this war going. The guarantee of victory is predominantly based on weakening the enemy forces, on destroying them in their own country, within the resistance. And we are the Trojan horses in the enemy’s fortress. Thousands of Jews living in Europe constitute the principal factor in the destruction of our enemy. There, our front is a fact and the most valuable aid for victory.” – Chaim Weizmann, President of the World Jewish Congress, Head of the Jewish Agency and later President of Israel, in his December 3, 1942, speech in New York

“Played golf with Joe Kennedy [U. S. Ambassador to Britain]. He says that Chamberlain stated that America and world Jewry forced England into World War II.” – James Forrestal, Secretary of the Navy (later Secretary of Defense), Diary, December 27, 1945, entry

“It is untrue that I or anyone else in Germany wanted war in 1939. It was wanted and provoked solely by international statesmen either of Jewish origin or working for Jewish interests. Nor had I ever wished that after the appalling first World War, there would ever be a second against either England or America.”
– Adolf Hitler, April 1945

The joke doing the rounds of the British Union of Fascists at this time was that the Jewish national anthem was “Onward Christian Soldiers.”

Jews behind that red shield

We all know how fast the central bank of Benghazi was set up by those very clever “rebels.”

The only countries left in 2012 without a central bank owned by the Rothschilds are Cuba, North Korea and Iran. Speculation has it that Cuba has succumbed, though I am not sure.

“Gentlemen, I have had men watching you for a long time and I am convinced that you have used the funds of the bank to speculate in the breadstuffs of the country. When you won, you divided the profits amongst you, and when you lost, you charged it to the bank. You tell me that if I take the deposits from the bank and annul its charter, I shall ruin ten thousand families. That may be true, gentlemen, but that is your sin! Should I let you go on, you will ruin fifty thousand families, and that would be my sin! You are a den of vipers and thieves. I intend to rout you out, and by the Eternal God, I will rout you out.”

All 9/11 airports serviced by one Israeli-owned company

Most of the “terrorists” in other countries are just fighting to come out from under occupation by the Jewnighted States, while the feds at home set up and bust patsies to justify their own terrorism.

By Michael Rivero
whatreallyhappened.com

It’s one of those instances when an innocuous comment in an unrelated news report triggers a revelation. In the article at afrocubaweb.com/news/israelispying.htm there is the following paragraph:

“To make the situation worse, a private security company called ICTS, owned by an Israeli, Ezra Harel, and registered in the Netherlands, was employed at Charles de Gaulle airport to screen passengers boarding U. S. planes. Most of its personnel are ex-Shin Bet officers. The company covers security at Boston’s Logan airport, where the American Airlines plane came down after flight attendants and passengers overpowered Reid.”

The point of the article was that ICTS knew shoe bomber Richard Reid was dangerous, but allowed him on board a flight from Tel Aviv to Paris. Maybe they did and maybe they didn’t. But the idea that an Israeli-owned company had inside access to the airport used to launch an abortive terror attack brought to mind the strange message Odigo Systems, another Israeli-owned company with offices near the World Trade Towers, received that warned of the impending attacks before the hijacked planes had even left the ground.

So, I went back to another story that had surfaced only briefly at worldnetdaily.com about how at least one hijacker had also smuggled a gun aboard one of the hijacked planes. Even prior to 9-11, getting a gun on board a passenger plane represented a serious lapse of security. I wondered why this story of a gun was being concealed behind talk of box cutters and screwdrivers.

Then I went back to the first article and its mention that ICTS handled security at Logan International Airport, from which two of the 9-11 hijacked planes had departed.

Sure enough, a visit to ICTS’ own web site at <http://www.icts-int.com/> confirms that ICTS is in fact an Israeli-owned company, and that it sells services to every airport from which the hijacked planes operated, including security, sometimes through wholly-owned subsidiaries like Huntleigh USA Corporation.

It has been suggested that the incredible feat of hijacking four aircraft without a single arrest at the gate would require the resources of a nation-State. This is even more true with the revelation that at least one gun had managed to be aboard a hijacked plane. One company had automatic inside access to all of the airports from which hijacked planes departed on 9-11, and to the airports used by Richard Reid, the shoe bomber. An Israeli company. One that Mossad agents could easily find employment at without the management knowing who they were or what their purpose really was.

But one thing is clear. By virtue of the Odigo warning, someone knew enough about the planned attacks to warn Odigo before the planes had even departed the airport gates, yet they did not call the Israeli security company at the airports which could have stopped the flights from leaving.

Think about that one for a while. Hours before the House version of the first Patriot Act went to a vote, “technical corrections” were inserted into the body of the legislation whereby foreign security companies such as ICTS-International would be immune from lawsuits related to the events of 9/11. Talk about not being available for deposition! This “Patriot” act legislative sleight of hand occurred before the inception of the 9/11 Commission when Fearless Leader George W. Bush was still resisting the very idea of an investigation into 9/11. Hence, in the face of an institutional cover-up, citizens were denied the possibility of a discovery process which is normally afforded to litigants. Without such discovery process, ICTS-International would never be compelled by a court of law to give testimony and show evidence related to the missing airport video surveillance tapes of 9/11 or any other aspect of security measures in place on 9/11 [rense.com].

“Evidence linking these Israelis to 9/11 is classified. I cannot tell you about evidence that has been gathered. It’s classified information.”

– U. S. official quoted in Carl Cameron’s Fox News report on the Israeli spy ring

“Investigators within the DEA, INS and FBI have all told Fox News that to pursue or even suggest Israeli spying ...is considered career suicide.”

– Carl Cameron, as quoted in The Spies Who Came In From The Art Sale

“While I agree with you, if I say anything about U. S. geopolitical interests with Israel, I might as well clean off my desk.”

No poverty is promise of an independent Scotland

“And only independence will give us the tools we need to rid Scotland of the poverty and deprivation that still scars our nation.” – Scotland’s deputy first

minister Nicola Sturgeon Scotland’s deputy first minister is to announce that an independent Scotland will get rid of poverty and deprivation while launching a scathing attack on the U. K. government’s “heartless” welfare reforms.

Speaking at the Scottish National Party (SNP) Spring Conference in Glasgow, Nicola Sturgeon is to announce that “only independence can stop Westminster governments squandering our energy wealth while our older folk struggle to pay their heating bills...”

“And only independence will give us the tools we need to rid Scotland of the poverty and deprivation that still scars our nation and create the opportunities that will get people off benefits for the right reasons,” Sturgeon will add.

Sturgeon will argue that the SNP has already shown that, with their “limited” power of devolution at the Scottish Parliament, they can make a real difference.

The U. K. government’s Welfare Reform Bill, which will impose a £26,000 a year benefit cap on British households, will be severely criticized by Sturgeon who describes it as heartless.

“Only independence can put a stop to heartless Tory welfare reforms that will punish the vulnerable and the disabled,” Sturgeon will say.

U. S. media cover up AIPAC’s global threat

presstv.ir
“The American media are extremely Israel-centric in their reports, leaving out a great deal of information that Americans need to know to have rational successful policies.” – Alison Weir, executive director of the website If Americans Knew

The truth is slowly emerging

Journalist Alison Weir says that the American Israel Public Affairs Committee (AIPAC) is a threat to the world.

“AIPAC is very dangerous to the world and it’s especially dangerous for Americans ...Currently, it’s trying to push the U. S. into an outright attack on Iran or enabling an attack on Iran by Israel... it’s already pushed us into major economic sanctions on Iran,” the executive director of the U. S. website If Americans Knew said in an exclusive interview with Press TV.

Weir also believes that AIPAC is behind the United States’ decision to impose economic sanctions on Iran.

AIPAC is “a special interest lobby” in the United States, which is working on behalf of a foreign country – Israel – and not on behalf of Americans, or on behalf of peace or justice, she stated.

“The U. S. media are consistently, extremely Israel-centric in their reports, so they leave out a great deal of information that Americans need to know to have rational successful policies, which results in the ignorance of the American public about the Israeli lobby,” Weir said, adding that most U. S. citizens do not even know what AIPAC is.

AIPAC is one of the most powerful lobbies in the United States. It works to

wakeupfromyourslumber.com
An AIPAC Policy Conference titled “Stopping Iran” got unexpected speakers: activists with Occupy AIPAC who stood up and “mic checked” Congresswoman Ileana Ros-Lehtinen and Israeli Ambassador Jeremy Issacharoff. At about 2 PM on March 5, four activists called out AIPAC for pushing U. S. support for an Israeli attack on Iran. One activist was violently attacked by an AIPAC member who used his tie to strangle the peaceful protester. Later in the same afternoon two activists unfurled a “Don’t Bomb Iran” banner inside the AIPAC hall. Security promptly pushed them out of the hall, and forcefully removed an AIPAC delegate who had nothing to do with the action, but was taken out for being a bystander.

The Occupy AIPAC coalition was there to urge rejection of Israel’s push for war on Iran and insist on Palestinian rights. Timed to coincide with the annual AIPAC policy conference March 3-6, Occupy AIPAC noted that AIPAC maintains a stranglehold over U. S. policies.

Afghan senate protest U. S. mass murder

Afghanistan’s Senate has closed in protest against the mass killing of Afghan civilians during a pre-dawn U. S. attack in the southern province of Kandahar.

On March 11, a U. S. soldier opened fire on Afghan civilians inside their homes in Kandahar’s Panjwaii district, leaving at least 17 people – among them nine children and three women – dead and several others injured.

The Afghan Senate closed an open meeting on Tuesday in response to the murderous act, with Afghan deputies demonstrating outside the parliament building in a show of protest.

Senate Chairman Fazl Hadi Muslimyar also condemned the Kandahar killing, accusing the U. S. army of engaging in crimes worse than those committed by Soviet occupiers.

Muslimyar called on all provincial councils across the country to close in a show of solidarity with the families of the victim of the American forces’ deadly shooting spree.

President guilty of high crimes and misdemeanors

Impeachment proceedings begin in the House and the Senate over Obama’s brazen use of aggressive military force without congressional authority.

By Eric Blair
activistpost.com
Since 2005, Veterans for Peace and others have been calling for the impeachment of the sitting president for war crimes. After their demands to lawmakers to uphold the rule of law against Bush were largely ignored (except by Dennis Kucinich, who introduced impeachment articles too late in 2008), they renewed their effort to impeach Obama once he continued to bomb sovereign nations without congressional approval. Now, some lawmakers seem to have finally decided to take the rule of law and Separation of Powers seriously.

Obama will face impeachment over his failure to seek congressional authorization before launching offensive military action in Libya last year. Official impeachment proceedings have now been filed in both the House and Senate.

North Carolina Representative Walter Jones has filed an Impeachment Resolution in the House, H.CON.RES.107.IH, stating; “Expressing the sense of Congress that the use of offensive military force by a President without prior and clear authorization of an Act of Congress constitutes an impeachable high crime and misdemeanor under article II, section 4 of the Constitution...

“Whereas the cornerstone of the Republic is honoring Congress’s exclusive power to declare war under article I, section 8, clause 11 of the Constitution:

“Now, therefore, be it Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That it is the sense of Congress that, except in response to an actual or imminent attack against the territory of the United States, the use of offensive military force by a President without prior and clear authorization of an Act of Congress violates Congress’s exclusive power to declare war under article I, section 8, clause 11 of the Constitution and therefore constitutes an impeachable high crime and misdemeanor under article II, section 4 of the Constitution.”

President Barack Obama becomes only the third sitting president to face impeachment following Andrew Johnson and Bill Clinton. Johnson was impeached for illegally dismissing an office holder without the Senate’s approval, and Clinton for perjury and obstruction of justice. Both were acquitted by the Senate.

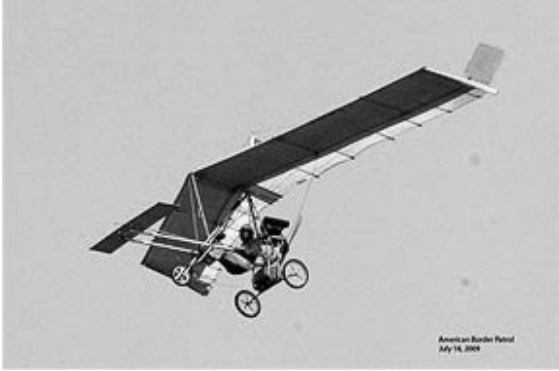

He vowed Afghan politicians will pursue their civil efforts to bring the perpetrators behind the mass killing to justice.

Responding to the call, the provincial council in Logar, eastern Afghanistan, announced it will remain closed for three

Sonic Barrier can help stop drug flights

americanpatrol.com
American Border Patrol reports that recent tests have shown conclusively that the Sonic Barrier developed by Border Technology, Inc., can detect ultralight aircraft of the type that are frequently used to fly drugs across the border.

The tests were conducted last month on ABP’s border ranch. They involved flying an ultralight-type aircraft at varying altitudes across and along a line of sensors. “Not only did the system spot the ultralight, it found that the type of engines they use produce a kind of fingerprint that makes them stand deployed without congressional approval and claims the mission was an international support mission with no deployed ground troops to justify their conclusion.

However, in no way were national interests under an “imminent” threat by hostilities in Libya as required by the War Powers Act, and supporting an international mission is irrelevant to the Act. Furthermore, Obama has maintained the legal defense that American involvement fell short of full-blown hostilities even after hostilities exceeded the 90-day limit of unauthorized use of force afforded under the War Powers Act.

The New York Times quotes directly from the 38-page report Obama sent to concerned lawmakers after the 90-day deadline passed: “U. S. operations do not involve sustained fighting or active exchanges of fire with hostile forces, nor do they involve U. S. ground troops.”

Therefore, the Administration claims, it wasn’t a real military conflict that Congress should concern itself with. However, at the same time, the White House acknowledged that the cost to U. S. taxpayers was well over $1 billion for these non-hostile military activities.

CNN interviews faked by activist “Danny”

By Alexander Higgins
alexanderhiggins.com
Syria activist Danny, the poster child to justify a military invasion in Syria, has been caught staging entire CNN interviews including directing fake gunfire off stage.

Raw video footage of the Syria activist Danny waiting to do a live video interview with CNN shows him directing off-stage fake gunfire and explosions, as well as being directed to tell CNN he has been retrieving the bodies of civilians from buildings that collapse due to Syrian army mortar fire. It also shows Danny totally exaggerating a sense of fear and urgency as he goes from being totally calm, smiling and even somewhat bored before the on air interview starts to acting totally scared, hysterical and pretending he is in the middle of a war zone as soon as the actual interview starts.

I have condensed footage of the original video to remove five uneventful minutes of watching him waiting around before the interview because most people will not stay interested long enough to get to the parts where he starts directing his off-stage actors to start the faked off-stage gunfire. Also there are two detailed reports from the Intel Hub and Infowars on this incident, which outline more faked activist reports and other crimes committed by the rebels.

If you were not already aware, the U. S. and European nations are relying solely on the accounts of these activists to justify invading Syria.

In fact, I recently posted another video of Syria activists staging videos of fake dead civilians about half way down on my website.

desecration of the Holy Qur’an by American troops.

ultralight proved that radar of the type used for border control couldn’t detect this type of small aircraft.

So what’s the problem?

In February Barack Obama signed legislation aimed at curbing ultralight smuggling. The Sonic Barrier system was demonstrated for an Arizona State border committee but the presentation was drowned out by accusations of racism and anti-Semitism, prompting a response by Spencer’s lawyer.

“It is astounding that real solutions to our border problems are somehow rendered meaningless by people who hurl invectives,” Spencer said.

Coincidentally, on the same day the impeachment resolution was filed, Obama’s Defense Secretary Leon Panetta acknowledged that the Libya War did indeed constitute military combat, but claimed the legal basis for spending U. S. tax dollars on war rested in “international permission”:

This impeachment comes on the heels of other Administration officials giving equally flimsy legal justifications for assassinating U. S. citizens without due process. Where, also last month, Attorney General Holder sought to clarify this tyrannical authority in a speech at Northwestern University by claiming “judicial process” was not the same as “due process” under the Constitution.

Yet, the Fifth Amendment clearly states “No person shall be held to answer for a capital, or otherwise infamous crime, unless on a presentment or indictment of a Grand Jury.”

Plainly written

And as Wikipedia defines due process: “Due process is the legal requirement that the State must respect all of the legal rights that are owed to a person. Due process balances the power of law of the land and protects individual persons from it. When a government harms a person without following the exact course of the law, this constitutes a due-process violation, which offends against the rule of law.”

The Obama Administration has clearly “offended against the rule of law,” and it appears his only defense lies in somehow changing the definition of words. It’s not a strong legal position to be in and it seems that, for the first time in history, a sitting president may be held accountable for high crimes and misdemeanors.

Nothing new here

The video is classic war propaganda, complete with staged gunfire off-camera and the intrepid actor “Danny” relaxed and joking before getting into character to give a hysterical “casualty report” to his co-star, CNN’s Anderson Cooper – just one of many he regularly gives to Western media networks.

“Danny” isn’t the first fraud caught being used by a duplicitous Western media to sell military intervention in Syria; there was also “Gay Girl in Damascus,” who turned out to be a 40-year-old American man based in the U. K.

It is exactly “activist-based” reports like this, that the U. N. and corporate media have used shamelessly to advocate Wall Street’s and London’s mandates.

Heroin harvest: NATO losing Afghan war on drugs

By Robert Bridge
rt.com

The western military bloc couldn’t persuade Afghan farmers to grow wheat instead of opium poppy, says Russia’s Federal Drug Control Service.

Viktor Ivanov, Federal Drug Control Service Director, gave NATO a failing grade in its efforts to wean Afghan farmers away from poppy in favor of wheat production.

“A standard example is the distribution of bags full of wheat by U. S. and NATO troops in exchange for promises not to grow opium poppy,” Ivanov explained at the 55th session of the UN Commission on Narcotic Drugs in Vienna last month. “However, in most cases Afghan farmers gladly take the wheat and continue cultivating opium poppy, which brings them superprofits.

“This means the alternative development status has failed,” Ivanov said.

Afghan farmers work on a poppy field in the Grishk district of Helmand province.
(Reuters / Abdul Qodus / Files)

The Russian minister recently revealed that the heroin flow from Afghanistan has increased to dangerous levels.

“The production of hard drugs such as heroin, opium, and hashish in Afghanistan remains at a high level. Opium production in Afghanistan went up 61% in 2011, while areas used for poppy production increased by some seven percent,” Ivanov said.

This indicates the narcotic production infrastructure as continuing to grow stronger in Afghanistan, which leads to more drug trafficking...in the direction of Russia, he added.

U. S. and NATO officials have been stuck in a Catch-22 in the fight against Afghan opium. On the one hand, they are attempting to “win the hearts and minds” of the local population, which increasingly depends on cultivating opium poppy for their livelihood. On the other hand, they need to cut off finances to the Taliban insurgency, which is fueled by the delivery of opium poppy to foreign markets.

The Islamic country now produces some 90 percent of the world’s opium, the great bulk of which ends up on the streets of Europe and Russia.

Epidemic proportions

According to recent statistics from the Federal Drug Control Service, Russia has over one million drug addicts, while the majority of them are addicted to Afghan heroin. More than 100,000 Russians die from drug abuse each year, and with the country in the grips of a dire demographic crisis, it cannot afford to ignore NATO’s flagging efforts to combat the opium scourge.

Treason of the elites

By Dr. Michael Hill
dixienet.org

Because the enemies of the South have employed the term “racist” so often it has all but lost its sting among our people, today the South-haters look for a new chink in our armor. Instead of yelling “racist” at every turn, they charge that our ancestors were “traitors,” and so are we if we celebrate and defend the cause for which they fought. Over the last decade numerous articles and editorials contend that all those who wave Southern flags and speak well of Southern heroes pay homage to a failed rebellion and are probably “domestic terrorists” to boot.

My response in defense of the old Southern cause will be brief. Southerners had every right to secede and form their own nation in 1860-61. There was no “rebellion.” It was thus impossible for Confederates to commit treason against a country to which they no longer belonged. The right of self-determination still exists. Rather than the South having to justify its clearly moral and legal position over the last 150 years, the burden of defense falls properly on those who seek to destroy our Southern inheritance and, by implication, all things Western and Christian.

Why do the neo-con and leftist elites rage against the “traitorous” South and its traditional culture and symbols? The stock answer, because all that the South stands for – orthodox Christianity, honor, hierarchy, loyalty to place and kin, patriarchy, respect for rule of law (just law; not what passes for “law” in 2012 America) – is an obstacle to the elite’s lust for absolute power. This is correct, but only one side of the coin. The other side reveals that the elites (including many false “conservatives”) have for long attempted to cover up the fact that their ideology, regnant since the War To Prevent Southern Independence and the subsequent Reconstruction, is a rebellion against the fundamental law in America (including the Bill of Rights). This rebellion has not only wrecked the South but the rest of America as well. Thus it is the elites who are the real traitors and domestic terrorists.

The treason of the elites involves such enormities as globalism – the selling out of American sovereignty (which really means that of the States) to international agencies and interests; the destruction of middle class jobs, exporting them to the low-wage Third World; floodtide immigration that is intended to replace the founding stock with more pliable Third World people already used to living under tyrants; destruction of the right of habeas corpus by the National Defense Authorization Act which permits the President to declare any American an Enemy of the State, allowing arrest and permanent detention without trial; no Fourth Amendment and no privacy (only a criminal would want privacy, right?); gun control so that citizens are unable to defend their rights and property; the deliberate destruction of the dollar; anti-White, anti-Western and anti-Christian laws and policies; confiscatory taxation; and that devilish trinity of tolerance, diversity, and multiculturalism that is crammed down the throats of our children in public indoctrination centers – the hallmarks of a totalitarian police/surveillance State in the making.

How do these criminal elites and their regime mask this unlawful and immoral agenda? By shifting the focus away from their own actions and onto the actions of those who oppose them. It is fashionable in elite circles to demonize the traditional South as evil incarnate, thus detracting from the purposeful mess they have made of America. Except for the anachronism of the South, so they say, America could take its place among the modern, progressive nations of the world.

The prime symbol of “Southerners as racists, traitors, and domestic terrorists” is, of course, the Confederate battle flag. This banner, one of only two in the Western hemisphere bearing a Christian symbol – the cross of St. Andrew – has become in many places outside the U. S. an emblem against tyranny of all stripes. The starry St.

Andrews cross, not the Stars and Stripes, has been used by freedom-loving people from East Germany to the Baltic States to the States of the former Yugoslavia and the Sudan. Criticism of the Confederate battle flag by the elites draws attention away from the symbolism of the U. S. flag – a much hated and maligned symbol across the world – in these latter days of empire and constant war.

Raising the starry cross

The battle flag waves defiantly because the elites have renewed their attack on the South with a vengeance. Rising political and economic power among Southerners fed up with an intrusive, exploitative and increasingly despotic central government makes them high-priority targets for the unholy alliance that is partisan politics in DC these days. Southerners are concerned about the abrogation of the Bill of Rights, and lawless nature of the regime in power, are on edge, and this proliferation of our flags is but the outward manifestation of resistance. Some things remain hidden.

The traditional South has rejected the elite’s culture, if it can be called such. That culture is one of death: abortion, AIDS, euthanasia, drugs, crime, sodomy, etc. Those who have embraced this culture of death have destroyed their own house, as it were. Now they are intent on destroying everyone else’s. The elites desire to make everything public and thus falling within their grasp. Every human institution must

Japanese want U. S. military bases gone

Over 90,000 Japanese demonstrate to remove bases

Pravda.Ru
Prensa Latina
Translated from the Portuguese version by Lisa Karpova

The U.S. military presence in Japan acquires special relevance recently due to proposals by Washington to reinstall a base on the island of Okinawa and indecision about Tokyo.

According to various data, not even the recent visit to this island by prime minister Yoshihiko Noda has achieved any consensus between the two parties, despite a bilateral pact that was in effect, signed in 2006.

But the strongest opposition comes from people’s organizations and even local civil servants, who together demand the closure of U. S. military installations.

Associations such as “No Military Bases in Japan,” in the country denounce that “there are 135 U. S. bases with about 54,000 soldiers,” of which 75 percent are concentrated in Okinawa.

For others, and this is the case of the governor of Yamaguchi, Sakinari Nii, it is unacceptable to transport these settlements to another territory of the country due to the risks, ailments and discomfort that it generates among the population.

Complaints

Since the end of the Second World War, the United States has occupied large areas of Japanese territory, and only in 1972 gave back a part of Okinawa to the authorities in Tokyo.

“These bases, declared the National Movement against such centers, cause serious problems in living conditions, destroy the environment and cause accidents and crimes.”

Lost sovereignty

Similarly, the Japanese government has not managed to limit the activities of Washington for the extraterritorial perks granted by agreements signed under imposition since 1950, they added.

Figures released in this sense specify that the Japanese pay additional costs for the realignment of military installations of the United States for nearly $26 billion.

On the other hand, both Tokyo and Washington maintain under strict secrecy information about the deposits of nuclear weapons in Okinawa and the logistical support system that allows them to control vast air space in Asia.

Not lost on conservatives

It is worth pointing out, according to anti-war sources in Japan, that even U. S. lawmakers Rom Paul and Dennis Kucinich admit there is a serious financial problem involving the aforementioned bases; a day of reckoning is long overdue.

Kucinich, quoted in the media, states that “We do not have the money to police the world and we should stop pretending that we do.”

The debate has now stalled, at least officially, and especially affects the more than one and a half million inhabitants of Okinawa, scene of one of the bloodiest battles of the last world conflagration.

Case No. 7:11-CV-238-D
LTC Donald Sullivan
Plaintiff sui juris and de jure
PLAINTIFF’S REPLY TO
STATE’S THIRD MOTION TO STRIKE

State of North Carolina, et al, Defendants
Now Come I, Lt. Col. Donald Sullivan, a man on the land, appearing sui juris and specially but not generally for myself and all others similarly situated, with all my rights preserved without prejudice, pursuant to common law and the Constitutions of North Carolina and the United States of America, to respond to the State defendants’ (STATE, Hockenberry and Kilroy) “Third Motion to Strike.”

1. I hereby re-allege and reiterate each and every argument and assertion in my “Response to Defendants’ Motion to Strike and for Sanctions, filed January 20, 2012, my response to their “Second Motion to Strike” and all other documents I have filed in the above captioned matter. Therefore, most of the State defendants’ allegations in their third motion to strike were responded to in my earlier responses, supra, and will not be addressed again herein.

2. References to “freeman” or “Freemen” is intentionally misleading. I refer to Article I of the U. S. Constitution, “Free persons.”

3. Right to petition guaranteed. Defendants say that I do not understand the law. US, NC, NCGS 11-11and 11-7.

I request, and this court should grant, the following:

A. STATE defendants’ Second Motion to Strike must be dismissed and the STATE defendants be provided 30 days to respond to my First Request for Admissions;

B. Leave to file requests for production of all audio and video tape, disks, documents, etc., which may be in the possession of the STATE defendants which capture the events specified in my complaint; and,

C. An emergency Rule 26(f) conference be held and a Discovery Scheduling Order be issued to prevent any further prejudice against me in this instant matter.

Respectfully submitted and stated,
this 13th day of February, 2012.

EDITOR’S NOTE

All of what follows is their attempt on March 1, 2012, to ridicule Lt. Col. Donald Sullivan’s case against many at the courthouse who just wink at one another and pay lip service to the law.

NOW COME the defendants, State of North Carolina, Hon. Jay Donald Hockenbury and Robert Kilroy, Clerk of Courts, by and through their attorneys, Attorney General Roy Cooper and Special Deputy Attorney General David J. Adinolfi II and, for the third time, move this Court pursuant to Rule 11 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure for a prefiling injunction and any other and further sanctions the Court deems just and proper against plaintiff. In support of this motion, defendants show the following:

Defendants hereby re-allege and reiterate each and every argument and assertion in the original Motion for Sanctions, Amended Motion for Sanctions and all other documents they have filed in the above referenced matter.

Plaintiff has continued to include ad hominem attacks, as well as vitriolic and abusive language in his filings concerning defendants and counsel, from his complaint through virtually every other document he has filed. Plaintiff filed a “Motion for Sanctions” in response to the defendants’ 12(b) dismissal motions, ostensibly for not having enough factual support (which is, of course, not a legal burden on a 12(b) movant). Plaintiff’s later documents include similar nonsensical ad hominem attacks, seemingly spurred on by his perception that the State should simply accept his warped, fictional, “sovereign citizen” view of the law, rather than respond, defend the Judge and Clerk plaintiff has sued, and cite the actual law. Plaintiff has accused defendants and counsel most recently of unprofessional and criminal acts as follows:

The attempts of the attorneys for the STATE defendants again to personalize this captioned matter... actions of the STATE defendants in this instant matter are undeniable violations of law... attempts by the attorneys for the STATE defendants to cover up these violations of law by clever and misleading use of the Rules places them clearly in the role of accessory after the fact.

“Plaintiff’s Response to Defendants’ Fifth Motion to Strike,” ¶s 2., 3. (Emphasis added).

Citing the law as it undeniably exists regarding juror oaths, absolute immunity and failure to state a claim is not a “clever and misleading use of the Rules,” nor a violation of any law. Defendants and defendants’ counsel have at all times acted in accordance with the law, the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure and all other applicable rules and codes of conduct. Far from personalizing our arguments, defendants’ arguments have been entirely focused upon plaintiff’s specious arguments, frivolous filings (including “sovereign citizen,” anti-government theories) and the fact that plaintiff has filed numerous lawsuits as nothing more than a series of ad hominem attacks on public officials. We do not know plaintiff personally, and have interposed no arguments that could be construed as personal.

The plaintiff in the above captioned case has, as cited in our previous motions for sanctions, for over a decade persisted in a course of filing frivolous lawsuits in United States District Court, Eastern District against public officials acting properly and within the scope of their professional duties (six (6) lawsuits in this U. S. District Court alone in the past eleven (11) years) - 5:01-mc-00015-BO In Re: Sullivan filed 05/23/01 closed 09/13/02; 7:02-cv-00187-F Sullivan v. United States EPA filed 11/13/02 closed 04/29/03; 7:03-cv-00022-F Sullivan v. USA, et al filed 02/04/03 closed 08/06/03; 7:04-cv-00103-FL Sullivan v. USA, et al filed 05/13/04 closed 07:07/04; 7:04-cv-00026-FL Sullivan v. City of Pender, et al filed 02/12/2004 closed 03282006; 7:05-cv-00132-BR Sullivan v. State of North Carolina, et al filed 07/13/05 closed 01/11/06.)

Plaintiff has not confined his fusillade of frivolous litigation to the Federal Courts, nor to public officials, however. Plaintiff has also pelted the State of North Carolina courts with similarly harassing, baseless lawsuits, including, but not limited to: Sullivan v. County of Pender, 2011 N.C. App. LEXIS 288 (NC. Ct. App., Feb. 15, 2011); Sullivan v. Pender County, 196 N.C. App. 726, 676 S.E.2d 69 (2009); In re Appeal of Sullivan, 672 S.E.2d 782, 2009 N.C. App. LEXIS 856 (NC. Ct. App., 2009); Progress Energy Carolinas, Inc v. Sullivan 2007 N.C. App. LEXIS 2070 (2007); Sullivan v. Massingill, 620 S.E.2d 197, 2005 N.C. LEXIS 1355 (NC., Aug. 18, 2005); Sullivan v. State, 170 N.C. App. 433, 612 S.E.2d 397 (2005).

With this tonnage of indisputably frivolous legal filings, plaintiff should not be allowed to, again, take refuge behind the specious mantra that, since he is a pro se filer he does not know any better, and therefore the Court cannot treat him as if he had any legal knowledge. It is well settled that, “[i]t is not the responsibility of the court, however, to argue a pro se litigant’s case for him, nor create one where one does not exist.” Stokes v. Watson Wrecker Service, 2010 U. S. Dist. LEXIS 99747 (M.D.N.C. 2010).

The law is equally clear that plaintiff’s pro se status is not a free pass to abuse and attack defendants or defendants’ counsel:

Neither the liberal pleading rules nor generous pro se practices of the courts has eliminated “the time honored notion that the law and the courts of the United States are important parts of American society worthy of respect.” Theriault v. Silber, 579 F.2d 302, 303 (5th Cir. 1978) (dismissing an appeal with prejudice because the pro se appellant’s notice of appeal contained “vile and insulting references to the trial judge”). Plaintiff’s pro se status is not a free pass to engage in abusive conduct, and Plaintiff is warned against further personal attacks...

Deneen Renee Knuckles El-Beyv. United States of America, et. al., 1:08CV151 (M.D. N.C. 2009).

As evidenced by the above referenced litany of twelve (12) baseless “Freemen,” “sovereign citizen”¹ lawsuits plaintiff has pursued in the past 11 years, it is obvious that plaintiff is not an ordinary, blameless pro se litigant innocently stumbling into Court for the first time, with a legitimate, viable case he does not quite know how to pursue. Plaintiff has more plaintiff’s ¹Defendants employ the terms “Freemen” and “sovereign citizen” as an accurate response to plaintiff’s filings because plaintiff refers to himself repeatedly in his numerous lawsuits as a “man on the land,” and argues he is not subject to taxes or State of North Carolina or United States laws. These phrases are the earmarks of the “sovereign citizen” document. The Court may take judicial notice of the fact that such language is not an isolated, eccentric creation of the plaintiff’s but rather part of a larger, and growing, extremist anti-government movement. This movement is characterized by the tactics and language plaintiff has consistently employed from 2000 to date, filing of false liens against Judges and, occasionally, violence or threats of violence against Judges and other public officials in support of its illegitimate, anti-government ends. Cursory research online can locate documents and philosophy virtually identical to those plaintiff employs (See [http ://freemanonthe land.com/](http://freemanonthe land.com/); <http://forum. freeadvice.com/civil-rights-discrimination-law-101/free-man-land-425225.html>; <http://www.splc enter.org/get-informed/intelligence-files/ideology/sovereign-citizens-movement>; <http://splcenter.org/get-informed/intelligence-report/browse-all-issues/2011/winter/extremists-are-coming-together-in-mon>).

The Court may also take judicial notice of the fact that people who share the mindset expressed in plaintiff’s documents have bombed a Federal building in Oklahoma City, crashed a plane into an I.R.S. building in Texas and murdered two police at the roadside during a traffic stop in Arkansas.

If plaintiff would rather not see his filings characterized as “Freemen,” or “sovereign citizen” filings, he should try to avoid using such groups’ tactics and language.

litigation experience than many practicing attorneys. He is clearly, illegitimately suing Judges and other public officials to harass and abuse them, to simultaneously clog and abuse the Courts of the United States of America and the State of North Carolina and to espouse extremist, “sovereign citizen” anti-government propaganda.

Plaintiff’s more than decade long effort is a calculated, diabolical part of a greater anti-government movement. It is also a totally avoidable abuse of the Federal and State legal systems in North Carolina. The Courts need only Order, and enforce, prefiling injunctions (or “gatekeeper” orders) against proven frivolous filers like the plaintiff.

CONCLUSION

Plaintiffs’ obsessive, repetitive, vexatious and baseless litigation must be brought to an end. The burden on the various Courts, as well as the parties who are sued, is simply too heavy and too unjust to endure.

For the reasons argued above, defendants respectfully request that, pursuant to Rule 11 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, plaintiff be enjoined by a prefiling injunction (or ‘gatekeeper order’) on any and all complaints, motions, petitions or other filings of any kind whatsoever in the U. S. District Courts, whereby no document of any kind may be filed by plaintiff without:

1) Appending an affidavit signed by a duly licensed attorney admitted to practice law in the State of North Carolina and the U. S. District Court in question, which affidavit must state that the attorney has reviewed the document in its entirety and, upon review, believes that the proposed filing;

a) can survive a motion to dismiss under Rule 12 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure;

b) does not in any manner violate Rule 11 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure;

c) is not barred by issue or claim preclusion principles;

d) is not repetitive of any prior lawsuit of plaintiff’s;

e) is not violative of any Court order; and

2) Obtaining prior approval and leave of the U. S. District Court to file the document in question, upon review of the merits of such lawsuit by a U. S. District Court Judge in the district in which plaintiff desires to file the document.

Respectfully submitted, this the 1st day of March, 2012.

Gaddafi donated €50 million to Sarkozy: claim

By Brit Dee
activistpost.com

French President Nicolas Sarkozy has recently been accused of accepting a €50 million donation from Libya’s former leader, Colonel Gaddafi. The allegations, made by French investigative website Mediapart, date back to Sarkozy’s election campaign in 2007. Mediapart claims to have seen leaked documents from a legal dossier currently under investigation by a judge, and journalist Fabrice Arfi has told The Guardian that:

We knew these documents existed but it is the first time we have had the details of what was in them...and there are lots of details, including dates, places and amounts.

One document allegedly suggests Sarkozy and his advisers made visits to Libya in order to secure campaign funding from Gaddafi.

It is not the first time such allegations have been made. Gaddafi’s son Saif al-Islam made similar claims last year, shortly before NATO’s illegitimate bombardment of Libya.

In March 2011, when Sarkozy was trying to rally international support for a no fly zone in Libya – supposedly to prevent Gaddafi from causing a massacre in Benghazi – Saif gave a Euronews TV interview in which he referred to the Libyan government’s funding of Sarkozy’s election. He said:

We funded it. We have all the details and are ready to reveal everything. The first thing we want this clown to do is to give the money back to the Libyan people. He was given the assistance so he could help them, but he has disappointed us. Give us back our money.

A close relationship with Gaddafi was also suggested when the Libyan leader visited Paris in December 2007, and was allowed to pitch his Bedouin tent in the grounds of a mansion near to the Elysée Palace.

Sarkozy was not, of course, the only Western leader with whom Gaddafi had close relations. In November 2008 George Bush reportedly called Gaddafi to thank him for paying $1.5 billion in reparations to compensate for alleged Libyan acts of terrorism – including the 1988 PanAm Lockerbie bombing, an attack probably not committed by Abdelbasset al-Megrahi and which some claim Libya had no role in at all.

Tony Blair was also close to Gaddafi, visiting him in Libya several times both during and after his time as British Prime Minister. The two met at the infamous “deal in the desert” in 2004, when Gaddafi agreed to stop pursuing WMDs and join the “war on terror,” again in 2007, and again a reported six times after Blair stepped down as Labour leader. Blair even reportedly traveled to Libya in Gaddafi’s private jet.

Thanks, friend!

The Gaddafis and Blair were seemingly on such good terms that Saif even referred to him as a “good friend” shortly before last year’s NATO attack on Libya, when he asked Blair to personally intervene and help prevent armed insurgents launching an attempted overthrow of the Libyan government. Blair remained noticeably silent about his connections to the Gaddafis throughout last year’s war, and has remained equally quiet since the Colonel’s brutal ousting.

Too much wealth lying idle

The latest allegations about Sarkozy again demonstrate the lying, manipulative, and two-faced nature of our elected leaders, where former allegiances are quickly forgotten when new opportunities to increase wealth and power are presented. Western leaders condemned their former ally Gaddafi for mobilizing forces against armed Islamist insurgents operating in his own country, so that they could use the

Director of DARPA departs Pentagon for Google, a move further reinforcing government ties

By Madison Ruppert
endthelie.com

Regina Dugan, the director of the Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency (DARPA), will be leaving the Pentagon’s mad scientist research agency for the corporate Big Brother known as Google.

Dugan has only been at DARPA for less than three years and was “offered and accepted [a] senior executive position” with Google, according to Eric Mazzacone, a spokesperson with DARPA.

Ties in with the program

Mazzacone added that Dugan felt she could not refuse such an offer with an “innovative company” like Google, which also has a close relationship with the American intelligence community.

Dugan has been a relatively popular director because of her emphasis on cybersecurity matters and next-generation manufacturing, which has garnered significant support from the Obama administration, which allowed DARPA to dodge the bullet of budget cuts that have hit the Pentagon as of late, according to Danger Room.

Dugan also is lauded by Danger Room for her push into “crowdsourcing” and her increasing outreach to the hacker community, which has resulted in some quite astounding technology like the miniature, inexpensive, and easily concealed spy computer known as the F-BOMB.

During Dugan’s tenure she also has diverted some of the quite substantial research funds devoted to long-term projects (some of which are a long way off from being used in the field) to more short-term operational projects.

“There is a time and a place for day-dreaming. But it is not at Darpa,” she told a congressional panel in March of 2011. “Darpa is not the place of dreamlike musings or fantasies, not a place for self-indulging in wishes and hopes. Darpa is a place of doing.”

While this might seem like a common sense statement coming from any other agency, when it is coming out of the mouth of the director of DARPA, which is behind such technologies as the militarized hallucination technology known as “battlefield illusions” (among many other strange and unbelievable technologies) it is remarkable indeed.

A few questions

Dugan’s history at DARPA is not all quite as glowing as it may seem, especially given her history with RedXDefense, a bomb detection company which she co-founded and still partially owns.

Currently, the Pentagon’s Office of Inspector General (OIG) is investigating contracts worth hundreds of thousands of taxpayer dollars that were awarded to RedXDefense by DARPA under Dugan’s leadership.

This shouldn’t be all that surprising to my readers, given that this is standard operating procedure for the war profiteers with blatant conflicts of interest like Dugan and Michael Chertoff.

A military memorandum revealed that a separate audit is looking into some of the 2,000 other contracts DARPA signed under Dugan in an attempt to “determine the adequacy of Darpa’s selection, award, and administration of contracts and grants.”

No results of the investigations have been released to the public as of yet and according to Mazzacone, the inquiries had “no impact” on Dugan’s decision to leave DARPA.

According to Mazzacone, “the only reason” that she decided to depart the Pentagon was the attractive prospect of working at Google.

“Dr. Dugan’s departure is not related to an OIG investigation,” Lt. Col. Melinda Morgan, a spokesperson for the Office of the Secretary of Defense, claimed in a statement. “The OIG conducts regular audits of Defense agency contracts and ethics programs; as a Defense agency, this includes Darpa.”

Probing further

“In the spring, questions were raised over whether it was appropriate for Darpa to have funded a proposal submitted by RedXDefense, particularly in light of the Director’s continuing interest in this closely-held small business,” Morgan added. “In response, the Department reviewed the processes in place at Darpa to ensure that those processes would ensure integrity and public confidence.”

Iran, you’re next!

The global signs of a coming military conflict with Iran continue to build, and on March 16 the U. S. Navy made clear its intentions by announcing it’s sending four additional mine countermeasure ships to the Strait of Hormuz.

Israel may well be able to start such a conflict, but probably cannot successfully finish it on its own.

Should this campaign not be executed with blitzkrieg-like precision, and become a sustained military conflict, the U. S.

purported threat as an excuse to militarily intervene, topple the regime, and then move in to secure lucrative reconstruction contracts and oil deals.

We now see a similar agenda being played out in Syria. The West is pushing to topple the defiantly pro-Iranian Syrian government, distorting the reality of events on the ground, where armed extremists responsible for terrorist bombings – in other words, Al Qaeda – make up part of the Syrian opposition.

Assad visited Paris for friendly talks with Sarkozy as recently as December 2010, when the Syrian president was greeted by an official reception ceremony at the Elysée Palace. Assad, Sarkozy and their wives even posed for photographs together at lunch in the Palace. As former French foreign minister Bernard Kouchner recounted:

“When we explained that this was the worst kind of tyrant, Sarkozy would say: ‘Bashar protects Christians, and with a wife as modern as his, he can’t be completely bad.’”

In a repeat of his betrayal of former ally Gaddafi, Sarkozy is now one of the most prominent world leaders demanding that Assad step down.

Mazzacone said that Dugan is expected to leave DARPA for the internet behemoth “sometime in the next few weeks” at which time deputy director Kaigham Gabriel will take over as acting chief.

Fellow traveler

“Regina Dugan’s leadership at Darpa has been extraordinary and she will be missed throughout the Department,” Frank Kendall, Acting Under Secretary of Defense for Acquisition, Technology and Logistics, says in a statement.

“We are all very grateful for the many contributions she has made in advancing the technologies that our war fighters depend on. She leaves for an exciting new opportunity and we wish her every success,” Kendall added.

The biggest question is: what will Dugan be bringing to the table at Google? It is certain that she will bring her experience at the highly secretive research agency to Google, but the major unknown is how exactly this will take shape.

While Google already has established connections with the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA), National Security Agency (NSA) (which refuses to disclose the true nature of their relationship with Google) and other government agencies, Dugan’s move will just serve to reinforce these links.

participation in such an action may not go well at all, as the U. S. doesn’t have the troop strength, money or manufacturing to successfully conclude that military action.

Add to this the reality that leaders from the nuclear-armed countries Russia, China and Pakistan have all gone on public record stating that should Iran be attacked, they will come to its aid militarily; so what we have here is the potential for a global thermonuclear war waged over an alleged Iranian nuclear program which cannot, to date, be proven to exist.

Sheriff Arpaio – “I Suspect a Forgery.” Now what?

By Lawrence Sellin, PhD
lawrence.sellin@gmail.com

At a March 1, 2012, press conference, Arizona’s Maricopa County Sheriff Joe Arpaio said:

“President Barack Obama’s long-form birth certificate released by the White House on April 27, 2011, is suspected to be a computer-generated forgery, not a scan of an original 1961 paper document as represented by the White House when the long-form birth certificate was made public.”

In addition, the Arpaio report stated that Obama’s Selective Service card was most likely also a forgery and the records of the Immigration and Naturalization Service cards filled out by airplane passengers arriving on international flights originating outside the United States for the week of President Obama’s birth, including the dates August 1, 1961, through August 7, 1961, are inexplicably missing from the National Archives in Washington, D. C.

Ready, aim, shoot messenger

Implementing the politics of personal destruction, the mainstream media have led the charge, first to discredit Arpaio and then to ignore the evidence.

Most of the mainstream media simply regurgitate the opinions of the news outlets Associated Press and Reuters.

The first sentence of the AP article says:

“America’s self-proclaimed toughest sheriff finds himself entangled these days in his own thorny legal troubles: a federal grand jury probe over alleged abuse of power, Justice Department accusations of racial profiling and revelations that his department didn’t adequately investigate hundreds of Arizona sex-crime cases.”

Reuters begins its report:

“A tough-talking Arizona sheriff, already embroiled in a Justice Department bias investigation, waded deeper into controversy on Thursday with an assertion that a probe by his office found President Barack Obama’s birth certificate was a forgery.”

Following the lead of AP and Reuters, CBS, NBC and ABC interspersed their own reports of the press conference with efforts to discount the evidence of an Obama felony by discrediting Arpaio.

Typical media attack

“The publicity-hungry Arpaio...The 79-year-old Arpaio, who has been accused by the Justice Department of racial profiling and who is being probed by a federal grand jury over potential abuse of power...

“Arpaio has also been criticized for allegedly inadequately investigating hundreds of sex crimes cases...

“Arpaio’s probe comes amid a federal grand jury investigation into the sheriff’s office on criminal abuse-of-power allegations since at least December 2009...

“...the U. S. Justice Department has accused Arpaio’s office of racially profiling Latinos...

“Critics also have sought Arpaio’s resignation over allegations that more than 400 sex-crimes cases over a three-year period ending in 2007 were either inadequately investigated or weren’t investigated at all...

“Arpaio faces a federal grand jury investigation on criminal abuse-of-power allegations; the Justice Department has accused him of racial profiling Latinos. And there has been an accusation that hundreds of sex-crime cases were inadequately investigated by his department.”

Follow the moaning

The singular raison d’être of the mainstream media has been, for a long time, to protect the political interests of the Democratic Party.

Unfortunately, the Democratic Party of today bears no resemblance to the one I remember from my youth in a blue collar New Jersey neighborhood.

It has been hijacked by left-wing ideologues who will say anything, do anything, right or wrong, to enhance their power even at the expense of democracy and the rule of law.

Mississippi advances new immigration law

By Hunter Wallace
occidentaldissent.com

A year ago, I would have been more excited by the Mississippi House finally passing a new immigration law.

It was frustrating to watch Arizona-style immigration reform die in Mississippi after the Republican-controlled Mississippi Senate and Democrat-controlled House failed to reach a compromise bill.

We spent the rest of the year anticipating the 2011 elections, hoping Lt. Gov. Phil Bryant would get elected and Republicans would capture the Mississippi House and eliminate the Democratic majority that was blocking immigration reform.

Phil Bryant was elected. Republicans captured the Mississippi House, passed the strong Voter ID law that had been blocked for decades in the Mississippi legislature. Immigration reform was introduced. And?

Mississippi Republicans gutted “Alabama style immigration reform,” passed something that more closely resembles Tennessee’s law. Gone are provisions that would check the immigration status of public school students, allowed police to arrest illegal aliens who had no documents, allowed police to check immigration status at traffic stops, allowed public utilities to refuse power, water, and sewer service to illegal aliens.

The specter of ACLU and SPLC court challenges and federal judges gutting the immigration law, as they have already done in Arizona, Alabama, Utah, Georgia, South Carolina and Indiana, was enough to water down the bill to a mere immigration check of illegal aliens who are arrested, an instructive example of how the federal government has usurped all the powers reserved to the States. Our actual rulers are powerful liberal special interest groups having veto power over State lawmakers.

Even if the Supreme Court upholds Arizona’s immigration law in June, it will only reinforce and confirm the principle that all power is in Washington. Most States are less bold than Mississippi and won’t even try to pass Arizona-style laws.

Vermont isn’t sued for announcing its intention to become a sanctuary State, nor California for passing the DREAM Act. Washington, DC, isn’t sued for publicly announcing federal immigration law isn’t enforced there. States and municipalities that are sued and get these expensive court challenges are only those trying to enforce existing federal immigration law.

Mississippi’s immigration and Voter ID laws will end up like those in neighboring States. It sounded nice and got Republican politicians elected in 2011, but disappeared into the bowels of the federal court system in 2012, not unlike the attempt to ban “gay marriage” in California.

Is Michael Hill right? Can we reform a system that is institutionally closed to reform? Let’s sit back and watch how this plays out.

War criminals Bush and Cheney no longer travel abroad

activistpost.com

Everyone in the world seems to recognize the obvious crimes perpetrated by the Bush/Cheney regime. Their overwhelming negative status in the world has now confined them to personal prisons where they can no longer travel abroad for public events. It appears they’re only welcome in heavily-secured private dragon lairs for the rest of their waking years. But even those locations are shrinking for these torturers and mass murderers.

Cheney, scheduled to speak in Toronto with his daughter this month, had to cancel the speaking appearance due to “security concerns stemming from their experiences in Vancouver in September 2011,” according to a press release about the event.

Not even among the posh

The September event referred to in the press release was hardly a public event at all. It cost $500 a ticket to attend and took place at the Vancouver Club which the Canadian Press called “one of Vancouver’s most exclusive clubs.” Still, the public caught wind of the event and staged a rambunctious protest calling for Cheney’s arrest. The angry crowd caused Cheney to be locked in the club for seven hours longer than he was scheduled.

In February of last year, George W. Bush had to cancel a speaking engagement in Switzerland because human rights groups put pressure on the Swiss government to arrest him over torture allegations if he enters the country. Even though officials claimed Bush had diplomatic immunity because he was a former head of State, they recognized that torture is a legitimate crime under international law. Organizers of the event felt the “atmosphere had become too threatening” and the gala went on without Bush.

Fools will be fools

Since Bush left office he has traveled outside the United States on two occasions with former president Bill Clinton. The first was a 2010 trip to Haiti after the devastating earthquake where he made a complete fool of himself. After shaking hands with a desperate survivor he scowled in disgust and wiped his hand on Clinton’s shoulder as if it was covered in filth:

The second trip chaperoned by Clinton was to British Columbia, Canada for the Regional Economic Summit this past October where

Amnesty International and Human Rights Watch called for his arrest citing his involvement in authorizing torture:

There is overwhelming evidence that Bush and other senior administration officials authorized and implemented a regime of torture and ill-treatment of hundreds of detainees in U. S. custody, including at least two Canadian citizens. Under the Convention Against Torture, Canada is obligated to prosecute individuals suspected of committing torture found in its territory if other countries have failed to

That trip was preceded by another event where Bush was to attend a private breakfast at an evangelical university, also in Canada, but was abruptly canceled due to a backlash of student protests.

In November 2011, a symbolic tribunal in Malaysia made up of the country’s former premier and a former federal judge among others, found George W. Bush and UK’s Tony Blair guilty of war crimes. “The evidence showed that the drums of wars were being beaten long before the invasion. The accused in their own memoirs have admitted their own intention to invade Iraq regardless of international law,” it concluded.

Macbeth knows the feel

Although the Malaysia tribunal isn’t officially binding as an arrest warrant, it shows the sentiment that is building around the world for calling these Western leaders what they are: international “child killers” and “war criminals.”

All of these stories seem to indicate that the circles where these murderers are still welcomed are getting smaller and smaller. Whether they will ever be actually tried for their crimes remains to be seen. But one thing is for sure; every time they venture out of their undisclosed bunkers, they get shoved right back in by angry mobs of humanitarians seeking justice for their wickedness.

“Jewish rights” to put studies out of schools

This inventor/writer studied not only horseless carriage science but what drives a certain deviant sect.

By Henry Ford

The Dearborn Independent, 19 March 1921

The organizations of Jewry are numerous and widespread, all of them being international in tone whether so chartered or not. The Alliance Israelite Universelle is, perhaps the world clearing house of Jewish policy, with which every national aggregation of Jewish societies has affiliation.

The Independent Order of B’nai B’rith, which is now hopeful of reaching the 1,000,000 membership mark, is frankly international. It has divided the world into 11 districts, seven of which are in the United States. Its lodges at last report numbered 426. The four members of its executive committee who do not reside in the United States reside in Berlin, Vienna, Bucharest and Constantinople respectively. Its lodges have been set up in the United States, Europe, Asia and Africa. Henry Morgenthau’s name appears in the 1919-1920 Jewish year book as a member of this executive committee. Mr. Morgenthau will be remembered as the American Minister to Turkey, later talked of as Ambassador to Mexico, then chosen by President Wilson to mediate between the Turks and the Armenians. Mr. Morgenthau also investigated for the President the reports of Polish pogroms.

Couldn’t be more obvious

In studying the executive committees of Jewish societies it is strikingly evident that the same minds guide all the important ones. A few names recur again and again. They are the names one meets at all Senate hearings, at various strategic places in the War Government of the United States, and at every stage of Jewish interference with American foreign policy. Everything centers at last, apparently, in the American Jewish Committee and the executive committee of the New York Kehillah. Judge Mack, Judge Brandeis, the Warburgs, the Schiffs, Morgenthau, Wolf, Kraus, Elkus, Straus, Louis Marshall – these names appear over and over again, in offensive and defensive action, in all big affairs.

There are now in the United States 6,100 reported Jewish organizations. Of these, 3,637 are in New York City. This figure is offered from the 1919-1920 year book, although the statement was recently made that the New York Kehillah is the clearing house of 4,000 organizations.

Enough is shown to indicate how fully organized the Jews are, how they are linked together by every conceivable bond; the material of every bond being their racial likeness.

The organization about which the public has heard most is the Independent Order of B’nai B’rith. Its headquarters are not in New York, strange to say, but in Chicago. Its origin, however, as might be expected, was in New York.

This interesting order, without a reference to which no survey of Jewry is complete, came into existence in the back room of an Essex street saloon in 1843. Strangely enough, its most moving spirit at the beginning was a Henry Jones, although his colleagues retained their Hebraic names.

Because most of the founders were from Germany the name was given in German, Bundes Bruder, which is in Hebrew, B’nai B’rith (Brothers of the Covenant). The executive committee was known as The Elders. The order spread first to Cincinnati, apparently taking the course of German immigration through the country, and it is recorded that the second lodge in that city is the first where the English language was used in discussing lodge affairs. The first leap of the order abroad was to Berlin where in 1885 Grand Lodge No. 8 was installed, followed soon after by Grand Lodges in Rumania and Austria. The order’s literature lays stress on the work of inculcating patriotism, which is said to be one of B’nai B’rith’s special interests. It is perhaps not meant, however, that the head office at Chicago could undertake, especially during recent years, to guide the patriotism of all the districts throughout the world. It would have been rather awkward for District No. 6, which includes Illinois, to encourage District No. 8 to loyalty, seeing that District No. 8 embraced Germany.

Noses under every tent flap

The Order has not avoided the political field. The diplomatic history of the United States in the last 70 years is dotted all over with indications of B’nai B’rith activities. Oscar Straus, writing from the Legation of the United States at Constantinople in 1889, tells Secretary of State Blaine that the Jerushalaim Lodge of B’nai B’rith at Jerusalem was quite satisfied with the way in which the State Department had attended to a certain matter at the lodge’s request. Mr. Morgenthau in the midst of his investigation of the false pogrom rumors on Poland, goes to a B’nai B’rith lodge. In 1870 Brother Benjamin F. Piexotto was appointed “as United States consul at Bucharest for the express purpose of securing an amelioration of the condition of the shockingly persecuted Jews in Rumania.” The “persecution” in Rumania was the protest of the Rumanian peasantry against the two greatest menaces to the peasant farmers – the Jew-controlled liquor and mortgage traffics.

But this special appointment was made “in pursuance of suggestions made by the Order, and the negotiations were carried on chiefly by Brother Simon Wolf.”

Simon Wolf has been the official Jewish lobbyist at Washington, on fixed post, for fifty years. He could write an informative story of the relation of B’nai B’rith to diplomatic appointments, if he would. It was he who suggested to William Jennings Bryan, when the latter was Secretary of State, that a Jew be appointed Minister to Spain to show Spain that the United States did not approve Spain’s act of expulsion back in the fifteenth century. Jews are also suggesting to President Harding that a Jew be appointed Ambassador to Germany to rebuke the Germans’ resentment against Jewish control of finance, industry and politics. This conception of the United States Diplomatic Service as a convenient agency for the transaction of Jewish affairs has been in existence a long time, and has accounted for some of the strange appointments which have puzzled the people.

It is worth noting that while American Jews are crowding the eastern diplomatic posts with as many Jews as possible, British Jews are doing the same thing in the Judaization of the Persia, India and Palestine governments, so that the whole mid-Orient is now under Jewish control, and the Mohammedan World is given to understand that the Jews are merely coming back from their conquest of the White races. To those who have observed the Jewish attempt to seek a rapprochement between the followers of Moses and Mohammed, the situation is one of the keenest interest.

The B’nai B’rith is made up mostly of the more liberal Jews, religiously speaking, and doubtless includes a large number who are also liberal, racially speaking. The time when it stood as spokesman of Jewish ideals is now long past; it stands today the center of certain Jewish activities. It does not supersede the American Jewish Committee by any means, but it is the encircling arm, with fingers everywhere, through which the committee can get its will carried out. When there is anything to be done, the B’nai B’rith is the organization which takes the lead in putting it over. It may be described as a freemasonry exclusively for Jews. This brings up another characteristic that people have noticed and discussed: the Jew demands as his right entrance into other Orders; into his own he admits none but Jews. This one-sided policy is found everywhere.

Chief among the B’nai B’rith’s activities in so far as they directly relate to the rest of the people, is the work of the Anti-Defamation League. This inside committee in every lodge attends to the espionage work necessary to keep the Grand Lodges informed as to what is going on with reference to Jewry in the United States. In its work, the Anti-Defamation League always takes the offensive and works along pretty well defined lines.

Ordinarily the head of the Anti-Defamation League in each city is a man competent to bring pressure to bear on the public press. Sometimes he is the head of an advertising agency which, as a rule, pools the Jewish department store advertising of that city, so that the newspapers may be controlled from that angle. Sometimes he is himself a heavy advertiser, pledged the cooperation of other advertisers in whatever he undertakes to do. The Anti-Defamation League is the instrument through which all boycotting tactics make their appearance. This league not only makes its protest from without, but directs reprisals from within. It is an exceedingly militant body and does not always depend upon “the rule of reason” in its activities.

The proof abounds

Many quaint tales could be told of the operations of the Anti-Defamation League in various American cities, but as the present articles attempt to give no more than a bird’s-eye view of widespread Jewish activities, mere story-telling will have to wait.

But perhaps the most notable accomplishment of the league has been the suppression of the word “Jew” in the public prints in any but the most laudatory connections. For a long time in the United States the people did not know how to refer to the Jews, whether as Hebrews or Israelites or what, because the fear of giving offense has been so diligently cultivated in all quarters.

The result was that other nationalities were laden with all the undesirable publicity which the Jews had evaded through the efforts of the Anti-Defamation League. Recently a Jew was on trial for the murder of his wife. The newspapers referred to him as “a pert little Englishman.” The Russians in the United States and the Poles also have been filled with indignation by the extent to which their national names have been used in police and newspaper reports to conceal the identity of Jews. The Russians resident in this country have several times been compelled to remonstrate with the press for its misrepresentative practice in this matter.

For this state of affairs, the Anti-Defamation League receives the credit. Whenever a newspaper printed the word “Jew” as an identifying noun after the name of anyone who had been discredited, the Anti-Defamation League was instantly on the job in protest. The stock argument is, “If he had been a Baptist or an Episcopalian you would not have told it, and why should you say that he is a Jew – ‘Jew’ being a mere religious denomination.” City editors are obliging and the rule became established. In principle it is right, although it is urged on wrong grounds; but in practice it has turned out to be a great injustice to other nationalities and, more than all, it has curtailed the freedom of American speech. It has concealed the Jew where he wishes to be concealed, and it cannot be said that he has made the best use of this privilege.

Goyim generous to a fault

It is this fixed policy of the B’nai B’rith’s Anti-Defamation League which imperils the hope that the B’nai B’rith might have come to the front as one of the most useful influences in the solution of the Jewish Question. It includes a body of men sufficiently acquainted with the general point of view to be able to see where corrections and concessions are necessary as a ground, not to mere polite tolerance, but to reconciliation. There is no country more propitious for the settlement of the world’s Jewish Problem than is the United States, but it cannot be settled along the old line of the Judaization of the United States, nor by its de-Christianization either. The work of the Anti-Defamation League is positive to Judaization and negative to settlement.

There is nothing that Jewry, acting through the B’nai B’rith, does so well as to hold mass meetings and attack “The Merchant of Venice.”

Mass meetings may be described as the Jews’ great American pastime. The New York Kehillah, that is, The American Jewish Committee, can on one day’s notice organize mass meetings in every city in the United States. They are mechanical devices, of course; they are not so much expressions of the Jewish mind as they are attempts to impress the non-Jewish mind. There is a great deal of theatrical calculation in them. This column could be filled with the dates and places of mass meetings held within any seven days on any question in which the Jews had decided to coerce or accelerate public or, as it usually is, official opinion. The mass meeting, it appears, can still be made to seem real to the political official whose vote is sought.

It was by mass meetings that Congress was coerced into breaking off our commercial treaty with Russia.

It was by mass meetings that the literacy test was defeated.

It was by mass meetings that every attempt to restrict immigration has been defeated.

In 100 important cities a mass meeting could be held tomorrow night if President Harding should attempt to remove a Jewish official, or if the census bureau should attempt to record Jews under their proper racial name.

It is a very perfect system, even if a little antiquated. Doubtless its main purpose is to let the Jewish masses believe that they too have something to say in Jewish affairs. Jewish leadership of the Jews is never quite what the Jews think it is, and its weakness was never more apparent than today. There has not been any “persecution” of the Jews in the United States and never will be any, but all that the Jews have had to carry in the way of misunderstanding has been the result of the leadership which has misled them into paths of bloated ambition, instead of substantial human achievement. At this moment there is trembling, not among the Jewish masses, but among their leaders. The Jewish people will presently take their own affairs in their own hands, and then their affairs will go better. There are too many “committees,” too many “prophets,” too many “wise men,” who think that two minutes with a President constitutes greatness, and that a busy bustling overseas and back constitutes statesmanship. The Jews have suffered from the personal ambitions and pathetic incapacity of some of their most advertised men.

The B’nai B’rith has this much in its favor: its leadership has always been progressive. Only when it has lent itself as local agent for the “leaders” of the New York Kehillah has it set up in its neighborhoods those influences which tend toward division instead of a better understanding.

Under whose inspiration it was that the B’nai B’rith undertook to bring its great power to bear against one of Shakespeare’s plays, cannot now be said; but it has been most unfortunate for Jewish influence in all directions. Successful – oh yes; but such a success as serious people could well do without.

Merely to glance over the record is interesting:

1907 – Jews force “The Merchant of Venice” to be dropped from public schools in Galveston, Texas; Cleveland, Ohio; El Paso, Texas; Youngstown, Ohio.

1908 – Jews have “The Merchant of Venice” eliminated from the English course in the high school at El Paso, Texas.

1910 – Apparently the “Merchant” slipped back into Cleveland schools, for in April the superintendent of public schools issued an order that it was not to be used again.

Thin skins would skin truth

1911 – Rabbi Harry W. Ettleson and Solomon Elsner request the Hartford, Connecticut, school board to have “The Merchant of Venice” dropped from the reading list of schools. The board complies.

1912 – Jewish residents of Minneapolis, Minnesota inaugurate a movement to have “The Merchant of Venice” dropped from the public schools. – In Boston, Massachusetts the superintendent of schools refuses to withdraw “The Merchant of Venice” as a textbook, on the demand of Rabbi Phineas Israeli.

1916 – On demand of Jews the New Haven, Connecticut board of education votes to prevent the reading of “The Merchant of Venice” and extends the prohibition to “Lamb’s Tales from Shakespeare” until an edition is published which omits the play.

And so on down the list of cities. A diversion was created by the Jewish attack on Sargent’s painting entitled “The Synagogue” in the art scheme of the Boston Public Library. Many denunciatory resolutions were adopted throughout the country with regard to that, but the painting is still there.

It is all part of one mistaken program, to prohibit free speech, with reference to the Jew. It is utterly at one side of all that American principles mean. Shut him up! Boycott him! Tear down his painting! Bar his words from the mails and public library! – what a waste of energy and what a self-judgement such an attitude is!

The relentless Jew

And it has become pretty general. Last Christmas most people had a hard time finding Christmas cards that indicated in any way that Christmas commemorated Someone’s Birth. Easter they will have the same difficulty in finding Easter cards that contain any suggestion that Easter commemorates a certain event. There will be rabbits and eggs and spring flowers, but a hint of the Resurrection will be hard to find. Now, all this begins with the designers of the cards. And even in this business one comes upon that same policy of declaring Anti-Semitic everything that is Christian.

If Rabbi Coffey says the New Testament is the most Anti-Semitic book ever written, what must be the judgement on an Easter card that is truly an Easter card?

In November, 1919, the Anti-Defamation Committee claimed that 150 American cities had excluded “The Merchant of Venice” from the public schools. The newspapers at this writing are announcing that David Warfield, the great Jewish actor, is going to play “Shylock” in the manner which, as he believes, represents the true Shakespeare conception. The Anti-Defamation League may yet find itself to have expended much energy beating the wind, especially as the best Shakespearean critics declare that “The Merchant of Venice” is not about a Jew at all, but about Usury as a vicious practice which gripped both Jew and non-Jew and brought division.

Thinking only about others

There was, however a certain finesse in the manner of the Anti-Defamation League in approaching the matter of the exclusion of the “Merchant.” It was not an incapacity to appreciate the fine work of Shakespeare. Oh, no, anything but that. Nor was it a confession of thin-skinned sensibility on the part of Jews. Not at all. No, it was really for the benefit of the Gentile children that the Anti-Defamation League wanted them kept from that play in their reading lessons.

Here are excerpts from one of the letters sent out from the Anti-Defamation League in Chicago to the superintendent of public

Why did Ford write those columns?

By Humphrey Robertson
firstfreedom.net

I would like to join TFF reader Patty Goldstein, (March 2012, p. 23) in sharing my appreciation for Henry Ford’s columns about the International Jew.

I became aware a year or two ago of these 1920-1922 articles by Henry Ford in which The Dearborn Independent tried so mightily to warn Ford’s fellow Americans about what he saw as their, and the world’s, “Foremost Problem.”

I have finally finished reading all four of the book volumes subsequently published due to popular demand for reprints of the columns as published in The Independent from May 1920 to January 1922. I’m just an average college-educated American and no great writer, but for me these volumes represent brilliant, masterful writing that’s thoroughly researched and comprehensive. His using practically all-Jewish sources gives them unimpeachable credibility.

Farther along

I can also say that most of the content could have been printed last week, with one exception: we can no longer be as optimistic as Ford was about resolving the problem by getting it out in the open for all to see (even though Professors Mearsheimer and Walt express the same hope in the preface to their 2007 book, The Israel Lobby). Ford complains of the suppression of that discussion in his own day, almost a century ago. Today The Problem is “the 600-pound gorilla” on the national scene, and one who doesn’t want to risk career, reputation and at times his very life is not going to attempt discussing or even recognizing it.

Ford’s brave and patriotic try to find the solution failed within a couple of decades, so that today The Problem has become The Answer for most people – and no other answer to any given question is permitted than the one put forth by the Mainstream Media and god-like Government.

Ford begins the first of his four volumes with a clear and simple statement of their purpose: “Why discuss the Jewish Question? Because it is here, and because its emergence into American thought should contribute to its solution, and not to a continuance of those bad conditions which surround the Question in other countries.”

He further explains this on page 49 of Volume I: “The question is here. We may schools in an important city. The italics are ours:

“We have just been advised that the... high schools still retain “The Merchant of Venice” in the list of required readings...

“We do not base our request because of the embarrassment which may be caused to the Jewish students in class, nor is our attitude in this regard based on thin-skinned sensitiveness. It is the result of mature consideration and investigation. Our objection is made because of its effect upon the non-Jewish children who subconsciously will associate in their own minds the Jew as Shakespeare portrayed him with the Jew of today. Children are not analysts. A character in the past vividly portrayed exists for them in the present. The Jew of Shakespeare lives in the mind of the child as the Jew of New York, or the Jew of Chicago, or the Jew of Newark. Your teachers of literature might say much in favor of Shylock’s good qualities, but our experience has been that only very seldom are Shylock’s good qualities brought out strongly before children. Those traits of his character which are brought out most vividly in the study of the play are Shylock’s greed, hatred, revenge and cruelty.

“The fact that the College Entrance Requirements Board realized the justice of our stand and struck the play off from the list as required reading for entrance to our universities and colleges indicates clearly that it is a most serious problem...

“...We believe that when you realize the be honestly blind to it. We may be timidly silent about it. We may even make dishonest denial of it. But it is here.” Again, this could have been written last week, with those “mays” removed.

Too nice to be “racist”

As for why he wrote the Dearborn Independent columns, he declares, “The motive of this work is simply a desire to make facts known to the people.” But, toward the end of Volume IV, Ford informs his fellow Gentiles (and the editor of TFF concurs): “Tackling the Jewish Question is not congenial work... Our Race has little disposition to chastise any portion of humanity, to arouse feeling or resist it... Our Race is too fair... to enter hastily into judgment.”

Ford didn’t know about television, but describes its effect well when he offers the following critique of 1920s entertainment: “Our mental hospitality has been grossly abused, the public mind has been made a sewer.” Ninety-plus years later, this is abysmally true, but a hundredfold worse than the 1920 sewer that Ford beheld.

A year and a half into the publishing of these columns, Ford feels great progress has been made on resolving The Question because, thanks to his beginning it, the discussion is now out in the open. In the introduction to Volume III, he states proudly: “The year [1921] has witnessed much notable discussion of The Jewish Question in magazines of quality.” Ford goes on to cite The Century, The Atlantic and other magazines, reserving special praise for Christian publications such as The Christian Standard and The Moody Monthly because “the religious press has shown itself to be freer of control than has the secular press.” Since the decade of the 1920s saw laws restricting immigration in favor of European stock (see Immigration Act of 1924), we can see one reason why Ford may have felt optimistic, and the nationwide discussion of The Question he had provoked must have been at least partly responsible for that legislation.

By the time Volume IV is published in May 1922, Ford is confident that “truth has made its way” in spite of “the tremendous emphasis of the American mind on racial peace and because of the ease with which racial propagandists can make a purely economic and political matter assume the great harm which might be caused to hundreds and thousands of law-abiding Jewish citizens of this country, you will grant our request that the reading of ‘The Merchant of Venice’ be discontinued from your schools.”

Whining for their pacifier

And in this case it was. Notwithstanding the fact that the play was used in the high school, and the argument of the letter was addressed to the effect of the play on children, it was discontinued. A study of the schedule of just what occurred showed that everything had been made ready even before the letter was written.

Does this frittering away of Jewish influence strike the Jewish leaders as a wise policy?

Is there any hope whatever of doing away with “The Merchant of Venice”?

Do they not know that it is observation of teachers of literature that even if non-Jewish children are forbidden to read the play, Jewish children are going to read it anyway, since it is the Jewish children who most heartily enjoy it because they more clearly understand it?

Do not the Jewish leaders know that non-Jews do not read the “Merchant” for Shylock, except perhaps his noble defense of the Jew as a human being? Whoever hears Shylock quoted in anything but this, which numerous Jewish writers delight to quote? –

aspects of a religious controversy” (again, this complaint could have been written last week). On page 240 he states that “the files of this office hold thousands of written assurances from newspaper men all over the land and from all parts of the world, testifying to the truth of our statements.”

Ninety years after Ford’s still-applicable complaints, and 70+ years after Charles Lindbergh’s warnings to the same effect (including a 1939 article in the Reader’s Digest), one can only feel admiration for these two great American men, and lament the fact that their biographies are now usually presented with a regretting note about their “anti-Semitism.”

The Problem becomes taboo

Charles Lindbergh and others carried on Ford’s warning during the 1930s, but our entry into WWII and its aftermath ended any further “mainstream” discussion of The Problem (Lindbergh’s 1939 article in Reader’s Digest and his anti-war speeches may have been the last openly public discussion of this now-forbidden topic.)

The four volumes discussed above are I Theory and Scope of The Problem II Jewish Activities in the United States III Jewish Influences in American Life IV Aspects of Jewish Power in the United States

Anyone who wants to understand 21st-century America should read at least the condensed volume or the introduction and closing of the four-volume series, and particularly the last two chapters of Volume IV, wherein Ford addresses first Jews and then his fellow Gentiles.

In conclusion, Ford urges Americans who are capable of seeing The Problem to “Observe it, identify it, eschew it” and to “erect again our own moral landmarks.” Ford was optimistic that the United States, with its tolerance of foreign cultures, would be the place where, after centuries of strife in various countries of the world, The Jewish Question would be debated and resolved, to the benefit of Americans and Jews alike (as explained in great detail in the last two chapters of Volume IV). How noble Henry Ford’s effort and great his courage! That solution failed in the short run, but his exposure of The Problem can serve as a great inspiration to true Americans today as we search for the truth behind our current plight.

“Teenagers” pour gasoline on, set White boy afire

Our sympathies go out to media flunkies whose jobs mean more to them than doing those jobs, but we feel much greater concern for the Whites who suffer because of their covering up Black hate crimes.

March 4, 2012 – Two teenagers set a boy on fire on his way home from school, cops said. A 13-year-old boy who police say was doused with gasoline and lit on fire last week while walking home from school is recovering from first-degree burns to his face and head.

The boy’s mother Melissa Coon said his attackers told him “you deserve it.”

said. [Now for the story...] Police have described the suspects as Black 16-year-olds, while the victim is White. “We were told it’s a hate crime,” Coon told KTLA. “They rushed him on the porch as he tried to get the door open,” Coon told KMBC. “(One of them) poured the gasoline, then flicked the Bic, and said, ‘This is what you deserve. You get what you deserve, White boy.’” By lighting the gasoline, the second attacker “produced a large fireball burning the face and hair” of the boy, according to a Kansas City Police Department report obtained by KCTV. “It was pretty bad stuff,” Detective Stacey Taylor told the TV station, adding that police are concerned the boy may have suffered damage to his eyes and lungs. Coon said her son put out the fire with his shirt and called 911 himself. He was rushed to the hospital and was treated for his injuries. She believes the students also attend East High School with her son, and said he will not be returning to the school. She also told KMBC her traumatized family plans now to move. “My five-year-old came in and asked me, ‘Mom, am I going to get set on fire today?’” Coon said. “I was in tears.”

Racial terrorism targets Whites in Philadelphia

Over the last two years the city of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, has been a nationwide trend-setter in violent hate and bias-motivated crimes committed by Blacks targeting Whites. The Council of Conservative Citizens has compiled data from reported crimes in and around the city of Philadelphia that clearly demonstrate a trend in which the White population of the region is being targeted by Blacks in the city for acts of violence based solely on race. It is recommended that White people avoid the city as much as possible, most especially the City Center area around Market and Chestnut. To learn more please pay a visit to the Council of Conservative Citizens online at www.cofcc.org. The Council of Conservative Citizens is

And in Selma they’ll never have sufficient “revenge”

How many times must the Black people desecrate Nathan Bedford Forrest’s monument in Alabama when the Jewish-owned ships that kidnaped them from Africa all had their moorings in Connecticut?

By Patricia Godwin
oldsouthrebel@zebra.net
It is with the heaviest of heart that I have to report to you that on March 12, 2012, at approximately 2:00 PM it was discovered that the life-size bronze bust of General Nathan Bedford Forrest had been stolen from the 5 1/2 ton granite pedestal monument in Selma’s Live Oak Cemetery.

Historical review and update

Selma’s first Black mayor, hostile and militant toward Whites, James Perkins aligned himself with Selma’s local domestic terrorist, Rose Sanders, wife of Alabama State Senator Hank Sanders, and coerced the Selma City Council to vote to move the Nathan Bedford Forrest monument from its historically accurate and appropriate location, the Smitherman Building Museum. The Smitherman Building Museum had been a field hospital during the War of Northern Aggression, i.e., the War Against Southern Independence! For weeks after its dedication in October 2000 and prior to the monument’s removal to Live Oak cemetery, Rose Sanders and her foot soldiers had launched attacks on the monument almost on a daily basis by putting black garbage bags over the bust of General Forrest, by pasting flyers on the monument depicting General Forrest as the founder of the KKK and accusing him of murdering Blacks at Fort Pillow; also, by leading the entire entourage of students and Black citizens commemorating MLK Day in January 2001 to the monument and throwing a rope around the neck of General Forrest in an attempt to pull the monument over while appealing to anyone with a pickup truck to come and they would succeed in toppling the monument.

Evidence ignored

Also, one evening three full garbage bags were dumped over the monument not merely trashing the Smitherman Building Museum grounds but desecrating the site. We and the Selma police sifted through the garbage and discovered three pieces of mail addressed to Rose Sanders’ law firm. Through all of this, nothing was done to Rose Sanders; not even a fine for littering!

The police were on the grounds when Rose and her foot soldiers threw the rope around his neck threatening to pull it over and nothing was done! All of this was reported in the papers along with pictures of her doing this and nothing was done! On February 26, 2001, the Selma City Council voted 5-4 to move the monument to Live Oak Cemetery just a few blocks from the Smitherman Building Museum. The footing was dug the very next day on February 27 in the rain and the foundation poured. Then on February 28, 2001, the monument was moved by some jackleg outfit called the Deep South Wrecker Company – not an experienced monument company! The monument was set with the direction of the all-knowing city council and militant Black mayor James Perkins, who owed a political debt to Rose Sanders for getting him elected mayor after two previous unsuccessful campaigns against longtime Selma Mayor Joe T. Smitherman. For those of you who have visited the General in Live Oak Cemetery, that will explain why the monument faces east and not north, as all Confederate Monuments are normally placed!

The long fight back begins

On May 17, 2001, the Friends of Forrest, Inc., filed a federal lawsuit against the City of Selma for discrimination, with Judge Brevard Hand of the Southern District Court hearing arguments on June 25, 2001, letting the case go forward on its merit and not ruling it a frivolous case. The City of Selma hired scalawag White law firm Gamble, Gamble and Calame, and used Valerie Chittom as an attorney employed by this firm. She was the lead attorney for the city. Mayor Perkins at the beginning of his term had established a full time attorney with an office in city hall, having appointed Black Attorney Jimmy Nunn with an annual salary in the $50,000 range! So, we wondered, why did Mayor Perkins hire the White scalawag law firm when he had a full time Black city attorney? Former Mayor Smitherman had not hired a full time attorney for the City of Selma, having

We do not “hate” that boy at right in observing how the Jew uses his people to neutralize our young White shown here, targeted by Zionism as the possible slip between Jewry’s world cup and its lip.

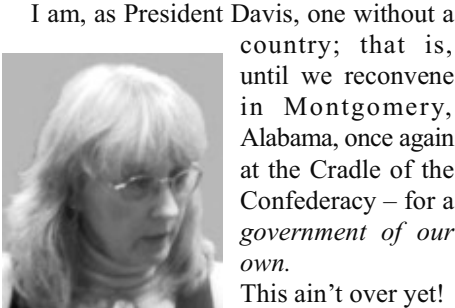

The Selma Times Journal thought this cute: a mob of Blacks led by the wife of “Let Us Prey” Senator Hank Sanders desecrating CSA General Forrest’s monument. Following that in-your-face photo-op, Selma Rose Sanders changed her name to something African: she’s now Faya Rose Toure. Fort Dixie has no problem with such quaintness, but objects to Negro attacks on anything perceived as White culture and pride at the same time expecting everyone to admire them the way Typical Media Flunkies do. And the 1965 Selma-to-Montgomery media march? Spook Bill Cox delivering nothing useful to the SPLC, it faded from the “news” after Fort Dixie got the Alabama Historical Society’s Yankee Director Lee Warner fired.

retained an attorney only when one was needed. Ultimately, almost four years later and after hundreds of motions filed by the enemy scalawag law firm, costing the city of Selma more than $200,000, Judge Brevard Hand – dying of cancer and in hospital on high-powered pain medication for most of the 2003 summer – dismissed our case even after having already set the trial date for January 12, 2004! Judge Hand died a few years ago. In the ever resounding words of Mrs. Robert E. Lee, “If there is a cool spot in hell, I hope he has it.” Looking ahead So the monument has remained in limbo since its “temporary exile” into Live Oak Cemetery at Confederate Circle. I say “temporary” because we have stayed busy raising funds to buy a private lot in Selma and develop the Nathan Bedford Forrest Park, with the monument moved onto privately owned property! We cancelled our appeal and will spend no more money on useless lawyers fighting Selma’s “reconstruction city government.”

We learned in the classic form there is “no honor among thieves”! How their system works The Selma City Council is made up of nine members: eight councilmen and the president. The vote went down with four Blacks and one White woman against us, and four members on our side: two White men and two Black. These two Black men, the honorable ones living up to their word and convictions that they had done the right thing voting to keep the monument at the Smitherman Building Museum, since then as I have learned, received numerous death threats. Neither of them ran for re-election in the next campaign season, but four years later, Mr. Benny Tucker has since been re-elected. It was the one White woman, Jean Martin, the council president George Evans and councilwoman Nancy Sewell betraying us when Selma had the opportunity to tell Rose Sanders to sit down and shut up. But they chose to fight the Friends of Forrest and deny Selma her history, heritage and the opportunity to enhance our tourism income and showcase all of Selma’s history along with some of that “tolerance” that gets pushed down our throat on a daily basis for every culture on the planet except Anglo-Celtic, which is constantly vilified, mocked and ridiculed. A few weeks ago, prior to the annual

Constitution up and put it on a shelf.”

Patricia Godwin writes from Ft. Dixie, Alabama.

Bridge Crossing Jubilee set for March 2-5 (the commemoration of the Mother of all orgies) I was notified that Rose Sanders had issued an appeal – over her radio talk show at her radio station 105.3 (we call it HATE 105) – for people to join her to go into the cemetery and remove General Forrest. The Bridge Crossing Jubilee began Thursday evening, March 1, at 6:00 PM with a reception at the St. James Hotel, then a 7:00 PM service at Tabernacle Baptist Church. On Friday, March 2, they officially kicked off the Jubilee on Water Avenue, with vendors and rap music usually lasting until Sunday when they have the commemorative “walk across the bridge to freedom.” But this year your tax dollars were really put to work for eight days.

Reliving the orgy

Beginning Monday morning, March 5, they – about 100-125 folks – walked ten miles daily for the next five days going to Montgomery, blocking both lanes bringing traffic to a complete halt. I know first hand, having got caught up in it Thursday trying to reach Prattville which ordinarily takes about 45 minutes; this day an hour and a half. The annual Selma street party requires county, city and State police working overtime; and, by the way, general services really have their work cut out for them, too, cleaning up the city streets after these food vendors dump trash and grease into the street!

Federal jungle law

Alerted about Rose’s radio appeal, we checked on the General all during the course of the weekend going into the cemetery after dark to make sure he was OK. Then on Wednesday my husband caught Rose’s talk radio show and heard her issue the same appeal. We were out of town Thursday and Friday, March 8-9, and can only determine that the bust was taken sometime between Friday night and 2:00 PM Monday, March 12, when discovering it missing.

Oh, and by the way, two weeks earlier Butch and I were driving through White Hall, Alabama, approximately nine miles from our farm, and the Southern Star Casino was all lit up on the outside. Butch and I said... Hummm, somebody must know something we don’t about this trial. Then a week later all were acquitted in the gambling trial. Ironically, on March 9 the marquis was flashing: ELECTRONIC BINGO – OPENING TODAY AT 4:00.

State law, too

So, the trial is over. All were acquitted. The 1901 Constitution remains the same. The Alabama State Supreme Court ruling remains the same. But, as soon as the trial was over and all were found innocent, the gambling casino in White Hall, Alabama, opened on the very last day of the annual “mother of all orgies,” culminating again in Montgomery at the State Capitol with a few hundred folks screaming to “Repeal Alabama’s Immigration Bill!”

“COUNTERING OFFICIAL Zionist historiography, Sand questions whether the Jewish People ever existed as a national group with a common origin in the Land of Israel/Palestine. He concludes that the Jews should be seen as a religious community comprising a mishmash of individuals and groups that had converted to the ancient monotheistic religion but do not have any historical right to establish an independent Jewish State in the Holy Land. In short, the Jewish People, according to Sand, are not really a “people” in the sense of having a common ethnic origin and national heritage. They certainly do not have a political claim over the territory that today constitutes Israel and the occupied Palestinian territories, including Jerusalem.” — Leon T. Hadar

The North Dakota oil boom

personalliberty.com

The average prices of a gallon of gas and a barrel of oil are near 150-year highs. Most pundits expect them to go higher. Are you ready for $5-per-gallon gasoline?

In a recent speech, President Barack Obama said: “We’re not going to be able to just drill our way out of the problem of high gas prices.” Actually, to a large extent, we can. For proof, let’s compare what’s been happening in California to the extraordinary accomplishments in North Dakota.

According to the Fraser Institute’s 2011 Global Petroleum Survey, California is the worst State in the nation for its hostility to drilling. In fact, measured against the rest of the world, California ranks 91st.

Thanks to many years of placating environmental extremists, California’s anti-drilling regulations make it almost impossible to drill for new oil anywhere in the State, onshore or off. As a result, its production of oil has fallen by nearly one-third in the past 20 years. As oil production has declined, so has tax revenue. Even with several gigantic tax increases during that period, oil revenues in the State are down.

That’s too bad, because California needs every penny of income it can get. It has one of the highest State sales taxes and personal income taxes in the country. Still, it’s not enough. The budget deficit for the coming fiscal year will top $9 billion – the fifth year in a row of billion-dollar deficits. Governor Jerry Brown’s proposed solution? Raise taxes even higher.

So you won’t be surprised to learn that wealthy Californians are fleeing the State as fast as they can. According to census data, almost one-third of its wealthiest residents – those earning $500,000 a year or more – fled the State between 2007 and 2009. On our Left Coast, they won’t drill for oil. And pretty soon, they won’t be able to drill many millionaires, either.

for all your faithful support during all these years – building the monument, defending the monument, protecting the monument – and for all the wonderful friends we have made during these years.

Once again it is a sobering reality that there is no justice for White folks anymore and the Constitution died at Appomattox in 1865. Thanks to the Lincoln government, national education and communist media, AmeriKans are misled by the illusion of a “theoretical document.” It’s exactly as President Davis said: “Lincoln rolled the Let’s contrast the near-bankruptcy of the People’s Republic of California with what’s been happening in one of the most independent and entrepreneurial States in the union: North Dakota.

Black gold

In 1995, the U. S. Geological Survey estimated that there were 150 million “technically recoverable barrels of oil” in an area of North Dakota known as the Bakken Shale. In 2008, the number had climbed to four billion barrels. Two years later, it had doubled to eight billion barrels.

Today, thanks to vast improvements in recovery technology as well as the discovery of vast new oceans of underground oil, estimates of “recoverable” oil in the Bakken Shale have tripled to 24 billion barrels. That is more oil than is being produced anywhere else in the United States, including Alaska’s famed Prudhoe Bay. But it’s a small fraction of what is possible.

Experts say that current technology can extract only about six percent of the oil they know is underground in North Dakota. Total estimated oil reserves are thus around 500 billion barrels. And new discoveries are happening all of the time.

Let me include an interesting footnote on the subject of “reserves.” In 1980, the oil reserves in the United States were estimated at 30 billion barrels. Yet in the intervening 32 years, this country actually produced 77 billion barrels of oil. In other words, we produced more than 2.5 times more oil than the leading experts said there was 32 years earlier.

Wake-up call

Today, the numbers are even more staggering. The amount of “technically recoverable” oil in the United States is estimated at 1.4 trillion barrels. (Please note that is “trillion,” with a “T.”) Unfortunately for us, most of that oil is located in areas Obama says we can’t search for it: in portions of Alaska and in waters off our shores.

Combined with known resources in Canada and Mexico, total recoverable oil in North America exceeds 1.7 trillion barrels. How much is that? Let me put it in perspective: It is more than all the oil the world has used since the first oil well was drilled in Titusville, Pennsylvania, 150 years ago.

So far, all I’ve discussed is oil. When natural gas and coal are added to the total, the numbers are clear: We have enough energy reserves in the United States to fuel all of our needs for 100 years, even if we never made another discovery.

Back to North Dakota for a moment. The effect of the bonanza there has been extraordinary. Stephen Moore, my favorite Wall Street Journal writer, says that what is happening in Williston, N. D., “is what the Gold Rush might have looked like had it happened in the time of McDonald’s, Wal-Mart and Home Depot.”

The State has the lowest unemployment rate in the Nation, at just 3.3 percent. California’s, by contrast, is 11.1 percent. That doesn’t even count the unemployed people who have simply stopped looking for work. The true unemployment number is probably closer to 20 percent.

According to the Census Bureau, North Dakota led the Nation in job and income growth in 2011. While California is losing millionaires every day, North Dakota is creating them faster than anyplace else in the country. But even entry-level positions are benefiting. For example, a job flipping burgers at McDonald’s pays $18 an hour plus a “signing bonus” for new employees.

Miracle of what works

And while the State of California can’t begin to pay all of its bills – it even issued IOUs last year in place of tax refunds – the biggest argument in North Dakota’s State Capitol is how to spend all of the money that’s pouring in. Legislators in Bismarck have approved hundreds of “shovel ready” infrastructure projects, including roads, bridges, railroads and pipelines. But even while spending more on worthwhile projects, legislators also agreed to cut the State income tax.

What’s happening in North Dakota is a classic example of the one thing that would solve our energy problems everywhere – and most other problems in the economy, too. Unfortunately, it’s precisely the same thing that Obama and his team won’t even consider.

The solution is simple: Let the market work.

In his State of the Union address in January, Obama declared that “This country needs an all-out, all-of-the-above strategy that develops every available source of American energy.”

Like so much that comes out of our President’s mouth, the sentence was as misleading as his skilled staff of speech-writers could make it. What he meant was that his Administration would continue pouring billions of dollars into every wasteful alternative energy pipe dream they could think up, while continuing to slap higher taxes and more regulatory handcuffs on the businesses that can actually solve our energy needs and make money (and pay taxes) doing it.

Rather than foster energy independence, Obama wants to make us all dependent. Dependent on government, that is.

Want to reduce unemployment? Increase tax revenues? Get the economy humming again? Truly foster energy independence?

The answer to all of them is the same: Get government off our backs. Let the market work. The results will be amazing. Maybe next year we’ll have a government that’s willing to give it a try.

Until next time, keep some powder dry.

Death of President Jefferson Davis

granburystexasbrigade.org

On December 6, 1889, the Christmas Season in New Orleans was saddened when Jefferson Davis died of unknown causes at the age of eighty-one. His funeral was one of the largest ever staged in the South.

The body of Jefferson Davis laid in state at the city hall of New Orleans from midnight on December 6th to the 11th. He was dressed in Confederate gray and flowers adorned the city hall. Confederate flags and the Union flag were hung from above. Thousands of mourners came from out of town to join the residents of New Orleans to pay their respects to the man who once was the South’s beloved leader. The men saluted their former leader and the women bowed their heads in prayer. Tears filled the eyes of young people who were born at the time Jefferson Davis was president of the Confederacy. The church bells rang throughout the city. On December 11, 1889, twenty thousand people lined the streets of New Orleans as the body of Jefferson Davis was taken, by funeral carriage, to Metairie Cemetery in the crescent city. The funeral procession included those who wore the gray during the War Between the States. All flags flew at half mast. It is sad that the War Department of the United States did not lower the United States flag in his honor. Jefferson Davis was the only former Secretary of War who had ever been denied the honor.

Confederacy mourns

Eighteen months after his death and temporary burial in New Orleans Metaire

Cemetery, Davis’s widow, Varina, decided the final burial place was to be Richmond’s Hollywood Cemetery, considered the National Cemetery of the Confederacy. His remains were removed from the vault in New Orleans and placed on a flag-draped caisson escorted by honor guards composed of his old soldiers to Memorial Hall, where he lay in state. The next day, as thousands of people silently watched from the sidewalks and balconies, the caisson bore his body to a waiting funeral train. On the way, bonfires beside the tracks lit up ranks of Davis’s old soldiers standing at attention beside stacked arms. In Richmond, gray-haired veterans escorted him to the Virginia Statehouse where thousands filed past in respect before interment.

Squaring the circle

To effect its purpose the Anti-Defamation League will have to perform an excision on our common English tongue. The wise and witty sayings of this Shakespearean play have passed into the permanent coinage of daily speech.

“I hold the world a stage where every man must play his part; and mine a sad one.”

“...I am Sir Oracle,
And when I ope my lips let no dog bark!”
“If to do were as easy as to know what were good to do, chapels had been churches, and poor men’s cottages princes’ palaces.”

“The Devil can cite Scripture for his purpose.”

“A goodly apple rotten at the heart:
O, what a goodly outside falsehood hath!”

“Truth will come to sight; murder cannot be hid long.”

“All that glitters is not gold.”
“A harmless necessary cat.”

“The quality of mercy is not strained,
It droppeth as the gentle rain from heaven
Upon the place beneath. It is twice blest:
It blesseth him that gives and him that takes...”

It is an attribute of God himself;
And earthly power doth then show likest
God’s,
When mercy seasons justice.”

This is beyond the power of the Anti-Defamation League to destroy. Shylock may be forgotten, but not these living lines. It is true, however, that in 150 American cities, according to the league’s claim, school children are prevented reading and hearing these words in school.

But is it worth it? Is it a part of “Jewish rights” that an admittedly great play, taught in all the English courses of all the universities, should be prohibited to the children of the people in the public schools?

From the prohibition of the Bible to the prohibition of Shakespeare, the whole Jewish course has been a colossal mistake, the reaction from which will be to belittle Jewish public judgement in the future.

Protecting Newark from art

It was all very well said by a correspondent to the Newark Evening News, January 13, 1920:

The Third Revolution dreams of a future

The Warlord A review

By Chris DeHuff
firstfreedom.net

The fourth book in Greg Kay’s Third Revolution saga, The Warlord, is a fast-paced thrill ride. Every volume of the series has been like that. This author has a knack for grabbing the reader by the heartstrings and taking you on a journey into the revolutionary future that awaits this country, or at least a very imaginative version of what’s coming.

One can only hope we’re lucky enough to have a leader of Franklin Gore’s caliber when that time arrives. Like the first three books in this series, we get an in-your-face view of the Southland at war, and, having come to know these characters quite well because Greg has done such a remarkable job of bringing them to life, we experience their joy and pain as if it were ours. In a future not very far distant, it very well may be our own.

“To the Editor of the News:

“Sir – Protests have been made by the representatives of the Jewish, Scotch and colored races against Shakespeare’s being used in the public schools, the former because of the portrayal of Shylock in ‘The Merchant of Venice.’ Some Scotch folk have protested, as I understand it, to the Newark Board of Education, on account of the character given Macbeth. The colored folks, judging from the letter printed in the News from Washington, do not like the character Othello, owing to his despicable treatment of Desdemona. As a descendant of the Welsh race, I enter my protest in behalf of that ancient people in regard to Shakespeare’s ridicule of Henry V, of the Welshman, Captain Fluellen, who is made to look as if he did not know anything about war.

“I have no doubt that others could find fault with Shakespeare’s penchant for holding up the weak side of some of his characters, so I think that Shakespeare and the Bible might well be kept out of the public schools because both books are rough on certain people whose identity is clearly shown. The board of education is to be congratulated for taking action in the matter, which promises at this late date to place the Newark educational system in a class all by itself.”

In this final episode, two wars rage to save the South. Actually, the one with the Union comes to an end early on, in a tense do-or-die scenario orchestrated by Jonathan Edge; but the peace is short-lived. Soon after that war for independence is decided, tragedy strikes the Confederacy again, and this time it’s intensely personal, a foreign power having assumed that a Southland recovering from one war is vulnerable and weak, big mistake.

An explosion decimates the Confederate capitol, and in retaliation General Gore pursues a war of attrition, whereby, believe you me, his vengeance is justified. Even in grief, however, he doesn’t lose sight of his noble purpose. Some may not agree with those actions and think them excessively brutal, but, considering what he had it in his power to do, I’m inclined to think the measures restrained, even merciful. All is fair in love and war as the saying goes, and in this case General Gore limits himself to an eye for an eye; the kind of nobility that is extremely rare, especially under such circumstances.

Read The Warlord for yourself, and see if I’m not correct in my assessment.
Over all, this book is well worth the read, and I highly recommend it. The last 15 or so chapters are a bit ideological, and thus slower-paced, but this is to be expected in a political novel. More importantly in that respect, for those of you who don’t have a considered opinion as to what our free South should look like, these chapters should prove educational.
Greg Kay has a very rare set of ideas in this regard and spells them out here at the conclusion of the series, making it crystal clear that we fight not just for freedom and survival, but our racial sovereignty as well. He invites Aryans from many nations to share in the realization of this dream.
And that’s what it’s all about, ladies and gentlemen, surviving and regaining control over our own destiny. Only then can we secure a future for our people. Greg gets it. I can but hope that the rest of us share his dream.

Turkish PM: Israeli attacks on Gaza are “State terror”

By Madison Ruppert
activistpost.com
Turkish Prime Minister Recep Tayyip

Erdogan made some quite heated statements in condemnation of the most recent Israeli air strikes on the Gaza Strip in a speech on March 13, calling the attacks a “massacre.”

A cease fire between Gaza militants and the Israel Defense Forces (IDF) went into effect that day but there have been reports of rocket attacks despite this agreement.

Thus far, according to Israeli news outlet Haaretz, almost 200 rockets had hit Israeli territory since the most recent outbreak of violence began on March 9.

The Israeli Air Force has conducted some 37 air strikes on targets in the Gaza Strip, 19 of which supposedly targeted rocket launchers while 18 allegedly targeted weapons warehouses.

These attacks have resulted in 26 Palestinian deaths, 22 of which were allegedly militants while four were civilians who had no hand in the rocket fire.

In a speech to the Turkish parliament, Erdogan called on Israel to “stop the brutal attack against Palestinians and stop the massacre and bloodshed.”

He also called the Israeli air strikes on Palestinians “State terror,” adding that the Turkish people have an obligation to “remember that Gazans are our brothers, and will always remain so.”

Turkish PM Recep Tayyip Erdogan

Erdogan has made some similarly strong comments in regards to the Israeli actions in the past, even going as far as to say that any further flotillas which intend to break through the Gaza blockade would be accompanied by Turkish vessels after the massacre on the Mavi Marmara, in addition to claims that Turkey was going to seek legal retribution for the murders.

Even considering his fiery words, Erdogan tends to fail to actually follow through, and I honestly doubt that he will take any action against the Israeli attacks.

During the speech Erdogan also took the opportunity to address Syria, saying that “the window of opportunity was closing following the massacres taking place daily in the country,” while also saying that Turkey was “making every possible effort to prevent further escalation in Syria.”

It is unclear if he is referring to the possibility of foreign military intervention or the vicious violence currently occurring between the armed Syrian opposition and Syrian government forces. Turkey’s (alleged) involvement with the Syrian opposition makes me think this is a somewhat disingenuous statement.

Interestingly, Erdogan’s heated rhetoric came in the wake of Israel’s Counter Terrorism Bureau issuing a warning to Israelis against traveling to Turkey.

The Israeli agency claimed that they had information regarding the intent of terrorist organizations to carry out attacks on targets frequented by Israelis and Jews in Turkey in the near future, according to The Washington Post.

There have been previous claims of planned terrorist attacks in Turkey – which were supposedly going to strike targets linked to the United States – but thankfully those failed to materialize, and I suspect that will be the case with these recent warnings as well.

Israeli ambassador to the United Nations, Ron Prosor, sent a letter to United Nations Secretary General Ban Ki-moon March 13 calling for the Security Council to condemn the rocket attacks at the hands of Gaza militants.

If the Security Council were to adopt such a resolution, I would hope that they would also condemn the Israeli collective punishment of Palestinians, which is a clear violation of international law.

Prosor complained of what he believed to be a lack of response from the United Nations regarding the most recent violence, saying that the United Nations “Security Council has uttered zero words of condemnation of these attacks.”

“There is something wrong with this equation,” Prosor claimed, adding that it was “time for the Security Council to speak with one voice against the terrorism that continues to flow from Gaza.”

I agree that terrorism should be opposed, but we must also recognize the terrorism that continues to flow out of Israel as well.

Not long ago anonymous U. S. officials confirmed that Israel was indeed responsible for training and funding terrorist operations in Iran.

If the Security Council is going to condemn killers in Gaza, I would hope that they would evenhandedly condemn the terrorists and murderers in Israel as well.

But of course Israeli officials believe they are exceptional and the rules don’t apply to them, so I’m sure such a resolution that took a fair approach would be condemned as anti-Semitic or something similarly nonsensical.

This latest wave of attacks led Israeli Foreign Minister Avigdor Lieberman to say that the Palestinians would no longer be allowed to have a territorially contiguous State, claiming that the people of Palestine “have condemned themselves to a separation that looks like it will continue for generations,” according to the Jerusalem Post.

This is quite tragic, indicating collective punishment, as Lieberman is holding the entirety of the Palestinians responsible for the actions of a handful of militants.

The Israeli government seems to be wiping away any and all chances of a so-called “safe passage” from Gaza, even raising the prospect of another Operation Cast Lead-like onslaught.

Why am I am running for school board?

By Christine Miller
cbmiller.com
I am opposing the indoctrination of our children into the holocaust cult by our public schools.

The tenets of this cult are:

- The Germans killed six million Jews, mostly in homicidal gas chambers.
- Everybody is therefore obligated to support morally, politically and financially a Jewish safe haven, Israel.

The facts

Who made this cult? The furor has been created by our public opinion shaping businesses. Who owns these businesses? Ask Alan Dershowitz.

How was it done? Relentless advertising put together from lurid eyewitness reports and forged pictures hatched the frenzy.

Who promotes it? The media, our schools and the churches.

A Shelf List Report from the Marshfield, Wisconsin, Senior High School Library is heavily overweight with Holocaust books.

On this list you will find Fragments, by Benjamin Wilkomirski. Wilkomirsky has been unmasked as an imposter. His book is a fraud, as demonstrated in my letter to the Marshfield News Herald.

On this list you will also find Never to Forget, by Milton Meltzer. In my book challenge to the Marshfield High School Library and my reply to Dean Markwardt, at that time director of library media, I recommended to the Marshfield school libraries the following books:

- The Auschwitz Myth, by Wilhelm Staglich;
- The Hoax of the Twentieth Century, by Arthur Butz;
- and The Leuchter Report, a forensic investigation of the “gas chambers” at Auschwitz. That examination proved that these rooms could not have been used as gas chambers. My recommendations were ignored and resented.

Then there’s this forged picture of a German cutting off the beard of a Jew in Goldhagen’s Hitler’s Willing Executioners. The fingers of the German’s gloved hand could not fit through the two holes in the scissors. It is impossible to cut anything with a pair of scissors holding them like a knife. There are a number of Jewish beard cutting pictures. All of them are forgeries.

And these pictures of mass bodies seen in many holocaust books: look more closely at the enlargements. Bodies like the ones shown do not exist. It is a crude painting.

There’s this picture with its fraudulent caption in the book World War II in the Madison elementary school, a photo that shows also destroyed buildings where one reads: “A grizzly scene at a German death camp. This picture shows less than half the bodies discovered at the camp.”

What’s the truth? The city of Nordhausen and that concentration camp were bombed by the Allies April 4, 1945. (The war ended May 8, 1945.) The death toll among German civilians there was approximately 8,800, compared with the concentration camp’s 1,500 inmate casualties.

Petersburg Campaign

This was a series of military operations in southern Virginia approaching the war’s end. The rail center of Petersburg, Virginia had been a strategic defense point near the Confederate capital of Richmond. In June 1864 the Union army began a siege of both cities, and each side built fortifications 35 miles long. Confederates under Robert E. Lee hung onto the cities, but supplies were scarce and Lee’s 50,000 soldiers became immobilized for lack of horses. In April, 1865, 120,000 Union troops under Ulysses S. Grant drove the Confederates behind Petersburg’s inner defenses, forcing the evacuation of both cities. Soon thereafter Lee surrendered at Appomattox.

President Davis pities North

The contest is not over, the strife is not ended. It has only entered upon a new and enlarged arena. The champions of constitutional liberty must spring to the struggle, like armed men from the seminated dragon’s teeth, until the government of the United States is brought back to its constitutional limits, and the tyrant’s plea of “necessity” is bound in chains strong as adamant:

*For Freedom’s battle once begun,
Bequeathed by bleeding sire to son,
Though baffled oft, is ever won.*

When the war closed, who were the victors? Perhaps it is too soon to answer that question. Nevertheless, every day, as time rolls on, we look with increasing pride upon the struggle our people made for constitutional liberty. The war was one in which fundamental principles were involved; as force decides no truth, the issue is still undetermined, as has been already shown. We have laid aside our swords; we have ceased our hostility; we have conceded the physical strength of the Northern States. But the question still lives, and all nations and peoples that adopt a confederated agent of government will become champions of our cause. While contemplating the Northern States – with their federal Constitution gone, ruthlessly destroyed under the tyrant’s plea of “necessity,” their State sovereignty made a byword, and their people absorbed in an aggregated mass, no longer, as their fathers left them, protected by reserved rights against usurpation – the question naturally arises: on which side was the victory? Let the verdict of mankind decide.

Confederate Government*

Self-government is only for the few proving worthy of it

By Olaf Childress
editor@firstfreedom.net
The Confederate States of America still exist. Know the rest of our story, for the worldwide web at last affords us a forum, as patriots both near and far respond with great sympathy to this latest resurrection of an idea that will not die.

In many occupied countries today, the “victors” decree several years of jail time for the Zündels, Rudolfs and Irvings, and death by hanging for the president of a once-sovereign State. But the neoconmen controlling such puppet generals, judges and journalists themselves live in mortal fear of the reprisals they have knowingly called down (yes, again) upon their own heads. Sic semper tyrannis.

As our voices were not heard above the war cries of 1860 in a mobilizing Empire State of New York, let us belatedly update the facts now. Under foreign occupation since 1865, these Confederate States of America repudiate Reconstruction in all its decrees except the emancipation of slaves, a mere incidental gesture meant to save the “victors” faces after having gotten bogged down in the same kind of blatant hypocrisy one presently observes trying on different excuses for having plundered and ruined Iraq. Those Africans might have been sent back to Liberia, all of them, peacefully, just as the Mexicans may easily be rounded up and flown home once our first session of a reconvened Confederacy unloads the bulk of its “affirmative action” baggage – that formidable task calling upon the White man after his century-and-a-half of “Civil War” and “Civil Rights” Reconstruction brainwashing.

Experience has found men more prone to suffer, while evils remain sufferable, than to right things by abolishing the forms to which they are accustomed. But, when a long train of abuses and usurpations keep pursuing the object and design of reducing them under absolute despotism, it is their right, it is their duty, to throw off such an occupation, and to provide new guards for their future security. The history of the present occupational regime is a history of repeated injuries and usurpations, its direct aim the establishment of absolute tyranny over these Confederate States of America.

When General Lee laid down his sword at Appomattox and General Grant sent the equally worn-out Northern soldiers home – neither side wanting to keep on killing – those surviving Yankee grunts could not imagine what curses their “victory” would bring upon all once-sovereign States and individuals forced like adopted children into this new banker-industrialist marriage of convenience.

For the “Rump Congress” (wanting a quorum) imposed its Reconstruction Acts two years later, and then ignored Article V by “amending” the Constitution – adding a so-called 14th Amendment that declared not only Negroes “Citizens of the United States,” but Whites both North and South as well. So the “victors” in Massachusetts and Illinois would shortly know the same kind of heavy-handedness that we likewise detest in Alabama. Most of our brethren don’t even realize today that they, just as their grandsires, are citizens of one State, not “the United States,” as that unratified “amendment” would have it.

The powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the States, are reserved to the States respectively, or to the People.

We, the People who came here of free will and created this nation of the South, appealing to the Supreme Judge of this world for the rectitude of our intentions, solemnly publish and declare that these Confederate States of America are, and of right ought to be, free and independent States, absolved from all allegiance to the United States government in Washington,

Atlanta Campaign

After General Sherman’s Union troops cut off the main Confederate supply center of Atlanta, he ordered that city’s evacuation on August 31, 1864, and then burned 200 acres of downtown Atlanta to the ground, a great conflagration. While the fire raged, bands played and those frenzied soldiers sang, “John Brown’s soul goes marching on!” From there, much like the Abu Ghraib crusaders bringing “democracy” to Iraq, whether they wanted it or not, that infamous general burned a forty-mile-wide swath of destruction across Georgia to the sea. Appropriately, one of the most formidable tanks sent during World War Two to “kill everybody that wants to make war” was named for this beast. Sherman’s victory helped the 1864 shaky reelection of Abe Lincoln, exactly as propaganda saved George Bush in 2004.

War and constitution end

APPOMATTOX, former courthouse of the Virginia county bearing that name, and twenty miles east-southeast of Lynchburg, saw the Confederate Army of Northern Virginia surrender to the Union Army of the Potomac April 9, 1865. General Robert E. Lee, in retreating from Petersburg and Richmond on the night of April 2, planned to withdraw into North Carolina by way of Danville. However, the Federal troops across his front at Jetersville forced him westward to Farmville, where he hoped to procure rations for a march to Lynchburg. Before Lee could reach Farmville, he came under heavy attack.

On April 6 at Saylor’s Creek, he lost about six thousand men. By the time Lee reached Appomattox Courthouse on April 8, long marches without food had depleted the Confederate ranks to two small corps. That night, the reflections of Federal campfires against the clouds showed the surviving Confederates they were surrounded on three sides. To continue fighting thus, Lee reasoned, would only carry a hopeless struggle into country that had escaped the ravages of war.

On April 9, at about 1:00 PM, Lee rode into the village and, at the house of Major Wilmer McLean, formally arranged the surrender of all forces then under arms in Virginia.

When on April 12 the troops marched into an open field to lay down their weapons and flags, Federal guards presented arms.

At Appomattox, 7,892 Confederate infantrymen surrendered with arms in their hands. The total number of troops paroled was about 28,000. Union general Ulysses S. Grant tried to get the Confederate commander to advise all the remaining Confederate troops to cease resistance, but Lee insisted this was a decision for the civil authorities. Appomattox became a national historic site in 1954.

District of Columbia; and that all political connection between ourselves and the United States is and ought to be totally dissolved; and that as free and independent States ours have full power to call out the militias, repel invasions, arrest and deport illegal immigrants, resolve peace treaties, contract alliances, establish commerce and to do all acts and things which independent States may of right do. And for the support of this declaration, with a firm reliance on the Protection of Divine Providence, we mutually pledge to each other our lives, our fortunes and our sacred honor.

All wars begin with a Big Lie

The legitimate government of eleven Confederate States of America, withdrawn from the United States following Abraham Lincoln’s election as president in 1860, consisted initially of Alabama, Louisiana, Florida, South Carolina, Georgia, Texas and Mississippi. After the North’s aggressive attempts to hang onto Fort Sumter in April 1861, Arkansas, North Carolina, Tennessee and Virginia came in. The C.S.A. elected Jefferson Davis its president, Alexander H. Stephens as vice president. Its goal was preserving States’ rights, not slavery.

But Northern industrialists and bankers in control of the rails, money and tariffs weren’t about to let their prey slip so easily out of the net. The South’s problem was in getting recognized by friendly European governments so as to trade its exports for “Surrender means that the history of this heroic struggle will be written by the enemy; that our youth will be trained by Northern school teachers; will learn from Northern school books their version of the War; will be impressed by all the influences of history and to regard our gallant dead as traitors, and our maimed veterans as fit subjects for derision. “...It is said slavery is all we are fighting for, and if we give it up we give up all. Even if this were true, which we deny, slavery is not all our enemies are fighting for. It is merely the pretense to establish sectional superiority and a more centralized form of government, and to deprive us of our rights and liberties.”

HOUSE OF MIRRORS

Recently I learned of the U. S. Holocaust Memorial Council. The U. S. Government has a huge investment in keeping the lies behind a so-called Jew “Holocaust” alive as propaganda for Americans and foreign visitors to Washington, D. C.

This Council is the governing body of the U. S. Holocaust Memorial Museum, a project of the U. S. Government. It consists of 55 presidential appointees, ten U. S. Congressional representatives and three ex officio members from the departments of Education, Interior and State. All get paid by the taxpayers.

Overwhelmingly made up of Jewish operatives, the U. S. Holocaust Museum and Memorial Council is very active in “holocaust” promotion and other causes solely for Jews. Yet American taxpayers provide the bulk of the Museum’s annual budget – $50 million a year, an outrageous squandering of taxpayers’ money. As a federal agency, the museum is a permanent recipient of federal support.

This museum is a disgrace. The evidence is overwhelming that the holocaust never happened. Even if there was a holocaust, its monument should not be on U. S. soil. No holocaust occurred here and Americans had nothing to do with the suffering of Jews or others in Europe during World War II. Since the alleged “holocaust” is now an official part of the Jewish religion, they have no right to build this monstrosity on government property. The only time the U. S. government enforces its so-called “separation of Church and State” is when it concerns the Christian religion. This thing was chartered by an act of Congress in 1980 when giving priceless government property for it.

Americans, most especially the Judeo variety, had MUCH to do with Europe’s suffering during World War II.

LOSERS CAN’T LOSE?

It appears that a few Jews are “on all sides of all issues,” to cleverly avoid a charge of conspiracy. Therefore, I hereby challenge Jewish writers Medea Benjamin and Max Blumenthal to clearly expose and condemn the evil Jewish control over our major media and government. Personally, I believe all Jews recognize Jewish “control.”

ARMINIUS THE LIBERATOR by Ingrid Zündel is the most detailed book about the life and struggles of this young German Cheruskan ever compiled. Overthrowing his country’s Roman occupiers, here’s the true story of an empire taking its crusade to “make the world safe for mediocracy” a bridge too far. For your 8.5 x 11, 324-page millennium softcover edition, send $50 to Soaring Eagles Studios and Gallery, 2662 Wears Valley Road, Sevierville, TN 37862. ARMINIUS belongs in your library.

LIGHT

One must at least attempt to counter the tsunami of disinformation which the patriots of this dark age are drowning in. Every issue of The First Freedom appears to contain a priceless amount of real data, and the fighting spirit to boot. I appreciated your exposé of the insidious Alex Jones, whose influence among would-be patriots here is crying out for counteraction.

NEVER STOP LEARNING

When I was a young man I thought of my father as being an old foggy, out of step with life as I looked at it. He has been gone for over fifty years now, and I realize that the older I become the smarter he gets. Strange, huh? The more I read your paper, The First Freedom, the more I find that it contains true information such as I never knew existed before, and I thank you for this.

Congratulations on showing and offering The Invention of the Jewish People, by Shlomo Sand. I am surprised the Zionists allowed the book and didn’t neutralize Dr. Sand. So many preachers of the myth have clouded gullible minds with the “Jews are God’s Chosen” – not telling which god is spelled out in Revelation 2:9.

WAR WITH IRAN?

What will be the next false flag attack to provoke war with the Muslim nations? Will nukes or dirty bombs be dropped on U. S. troops in Afghanistan by Mossad agents and blamed on the Arabs? The U. S. has military bases scattered all over the globe and is stretched to its limits. Many soldiers are in the Mideast, an especially high concentration in Afghanistan – sitting ducks for a nuke attack.

Remember the slaughter of thousands of British men, women and children in Afghanistan during the middle of the nineteenth century? The Illuminati did not want those troops to return. They were set up to be massacred at the hands of the Afghan rebels.

And who do you think supplied modern arms to the Afghan rebels? The same merchant class that sold firearms and fire water to the American Indians? The Indians traded much of their land for booze and guns. Those merchants also ended up with many of the farms of early settlers whom the Indians had brutally slaughtered with their firearms. Will the Goyim ever wake up to Shylock’s treachery? Get the troops out of the Middle East, now!

SLEEPING ON THE JOB

Enjoyed your February issue; “How to avoid voting for a globalist puppet” was excellent. Texe Marrs often writes about this very subject. The way to come out from under federal control is for “We the People” to start taking back our communities and counties by electing the proper people for sheriff, mayor, town council, etc. A sheriff has authority to keep federal officials from unlawful actions within the county. It’s a shame that not many sheriffs exercise this authority today.

ARTIFICIAL SHORTAGES

I really like your take and perspective on national and world events and history, but please give this some thought!

After WWII, the World Bank and I.M.F. threaten the U.S.A. and England with the continuation of their Great Depression if the Zionist Jew Rothschild doesn’t receive Palestine as his private kingdom – which he now calls Israel and uses as a hideout for his worldwide criminal organization’s base of operations.

But to keep base camp Israel safe he has to control all currency in the region, using these Mideast countries’ economies, their wealth and banking systems to enslave and dictate this vast area’s laws, politics, media and government, which explains today’s gas prices.

The Rothschilds and World Bank/I.M.F. want to take over Iran’s banking system. But Iran ain’t as stupid as we. They know all is lost if they don’t control the country’s monetary system. So the Rothschilds tell their bankrupted and owned countries to stop buying Iran’s oil by June! Iran calls that bluff, says we stop giving you our oil at the end of February. And that is 20% of Europe’s oil. Now Rothschild has created himself a problem. The U. S. has always pumped enough oil and gas from our own land and coastal waters. But Rothschild has his controlled media tell us dumb masses we’re using imported oil in order to control consumption and prices, so we fall for our economic enslavement and lost properties.

Oil from the Alaskan pipeline has gone to Japan and China for the last 20 years, not the continental USA! Also, all oil and gas taken from the Gulf Coast and surroundings is loaded into oil tankers, floated 201 miles out to sea where the tanker captain checks his ship’s position into the GPS, turns that load around and takes the oil right back to New Orleans or Galveston. So they not only avoid royalties, but sell the stolen oil as imported, and the problem of that 20% missing Iranian oil in Europe is cured by raising our prices $2.00 a gallon.

Check out the gas prices in Venezuela. Last I looked it was 14¢ a gallon. Doesn’t that make you proud to be an American?

The First Freedom does a great job of exposing the Zionists and their disgusting agenda. I see the Jews as single-handedly responsible for so many of our planet’s shortcomings, and it pleases me greatly to know that I’m not the only one fighting this raging war. White needs to unite White and once again take our land back. Never give up!

INFAMY

Thank you very much for running the story on young Rachel Corrie, the peace activist murdered by an Israeli thug in 2003. Miss Corrie was a good friend of my brother-in-law, and I remember when she was killed. The blatant disregard for her life by a corrupt Amerikan regime is jaw-dropping. I know some folks that are going to be full of joy knowing that she has not been forgotten, that her name and memory lives on, and has become a battle cry of sorts. On behalf of those folks, I raise a fist salute of honor.

ROAD TO NOWHERE

We don’t see much resistance from the White folks to their ongoing, heinously deceptive holocaust under the disguise of “diversity,” “multi-culturalism,” measures encouraging racial inter-breeding, etc. Americans are a nation of do-gooders, so a lot of them fall for globalist deceptions, some even foolishly collaborating in their own suicidal activities. (Negro for U. S. President! How stupid can it get?) Other Americans constitute what Eric Holder calls “nation of cowards.” They would rather die than be called “anti-Semites.” Globalists effectively use this accusation to stop any resistance by Whites.

THEATRICS

This dog and pony show called a race for President is gagging, with the Republican endeavor insuring Obama’s second term. Plus, with the fever concerning Iran in the mix, should war with Iran develop before election 2012, very likely changing horses in the middle of the stream will not fly.

Is a scoundrel who can’t confess his error irredeemable?

By Olaf Childress
editor@firstfreedom.net

In one sense, the opposite of that good which has sprung from primal chaos isn’t evil but stupidity. We are born slow-witted with a single idea: to accept the proffered teat. No matter what fortunes we’ll suffer or enjoy later out of free choices, they’re ever and only before us. Omar explained this ultimatum most exquisitely: “...nor all thy Piety nor Wit / Shall lure it back to cancel half a line, / Nor all thy Tears wash out a Word of it.

Life starts shaping from a first decision. That affirmation favors survival of oneself, an easy choice thanks to more instinctively dependable guidance than is waiting to test us progressively with each passing year. Who knows what lies out there? Perhaps we’ll reflect and pray often, taking similar counsel at each critical moment rather than impulsively “voting” for or against things beyond our grasp. Perhaps not.

Cultivating decisiveness

Some people become bold and informed decision-makers, diving always gladly into the growth medium of controversy. They counter ill-formed opinions in the Socratic manner at the same time reexamining what is already “proven,” necessarily escorting such indoctrination as the holohoax to its final redoubt – skewering that idea while honing both their teaching skills and the disciple’s guard against easy beguilement. Quis docet discit.

Most of us prefer to avoid a hassle, and settle for whatever niche assigned by our “betters.” The problem is, of course, all too often they aren’t.

Unchallenged, the spirit doesn’t thrive. Each chicken finds its place in the pecking order, just as men and nations skirmish for physical or rational positions. Competition is the fuel that drives all toward laudable improvement.

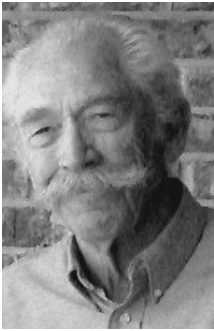

Surviving our first choice, which favors life, we choose between other alternatives such as whether to salute everything that wants attention or stay picky and vigilant against questionable claims. Capitulate to the bully – or discover the thrill of a good fistfight?

Each party in the heat of battle sees its own argument as best, never evil, a loser getting only his dues. Call life’s duplicity cruel and beautiful. Anyone lost for weeks with tattered sails on stormy seas, no star to guide except faith, prayer and the vigilant maintenance of what remains, appreciates far better than the unperturbed landlubber a safe haven however temporary.

Fine weather

The best we might hope for is here and now. If the sun doesn’t momentarily shine, still consider any day you can get a good one. Bound within the inescapable law that there’s no luring yesterday back, before us are the choices we’ve narrowed it down to. If controversy were not the will of God, our life-nourishing struggles wouldn’t be.

Deprived of a worthy opponent in some Schlaraffenland, one can substitute himself for that whetstone upon which to sharpen his guard against all-too-easy answers. No matter what dumb “luck,” undisciplined attitude, act or decision in the changeless past landed him there, since he lives and breathes, that mountain of self-accusation is ample awareness for redirecting his life toward a better future. Whoever takes giant strides in error will at least have gained a certain mental agility.

The very Spring of eternal life, whereto we believe all sentient creation returns, is likely no less bound by the laws dictating choices and consequences than ourselves. If there were no God, some say, man would invent Him. Think about that. Why such a desire? This universal belief, as confirmed throughout the ages by most men accepting both life’s nourishment and Source while disagreeing only on the rites of worship, finds everything Good worth striving for and its denial stupid.

Expertise vs. adolescence

Naturally there’ll always be those more wrapped up in appearances than substance who settle for nothing less than the proof. They can accept the movements of planets, electrons and their own bowels, but where is this cosmic law Enforcer; what’s to stop charlatans from usurping that mantle and enslaving such guileless peoples? Setting themselves over most human governments, those actors ignore their own stupidity and that of the typical media flunkies they hire to keep us brainwashed masses unaware of our pathetic subservience to nobodies.

Let’s consider whether or not God paces human progress to its best advantage when shielding tiny intellects from information overload, and stick with simple faith rather than, like an obstinate Phaethon, trying to discover or even give away His benevolent arcanum. Indeed, while investigating such phenomena as appear before our eyes, one must recognize at each season the enigma of life’s divine origins. Although scientists concur there’s no such thing as perpetual motion, invariably following winter’s cold that denial is denied by a beautiful spring.

Its champs detest diversity

Therefore we’ll not reckon the various races of mankind nor multiple arguments within each of them as anything but good, and challenge only the stupidity of those would-be knights errant who seek to put the world through a blender. For we need competition, disputes, elections, alternate opinions, discrimination, debate and racial distinctions, to keep at arms-length people infected with this crazy idea of arresting such healthy embroilments. A normal man sharpens his fellow men, while bad apples make better compost than do chemicals.

The Ashkenazi mentality that beguiles so many of those who watch television (TWWT), however, will have none of the above (NOTA), and is betting all the FRNs its printing plates can spit out between now and November on TWWT falling for the game one more time. Indeed we must vote our States and people out of that mixer by refusing to participate in a rigged “choice” between Dee and Dum for President, while okaying the few, if any, uncompromised home candidates for office; otherwise let us write in “NOTA.”

Stupidity painting itself into a corner, then whimpering, “Anti-Semitism!” is not unique. Nature’s unfailing balance, unlike that devised by our Founding Fathers, calls forth such excuse-makers in every age. As V. T. Rajshekar notes, those statutes passed by “the (Brahmin) Jews of India” banning “racism” from all other races didn’t stop themselves from practicing discrimination. Poets who write about the evils of fences are often reluctant to admit that they’ve a few mental ones of their own.

In today’s India, where starving farmers resort increasingly to suicide, is a lesson for us. Throughout the millennia, some of their sects have retained this idea that life is a bother, each present soul having lived many times in the past and its best prospect submission to a cosmic wheel’s supposed requirements for lasting extinction. Now that’s despair.

Reconstructing sensibilities

But, here in the West, TWWT also have doubts about life. There’s “inequality” in the world? Stamp it out! Whites are calling for “profiling” those “youths” who commit most of the crimes? Off with their “racist” heads!

It’s quite possible the sputtering Jewish mediacracy in its next life will bring forth some even more stupid arguments against “terrorists” making light of the low-on-gas Project for a New American Century. Iran sends condolences.

The excuses never cease to amaze those who prefer challenges, not crutches. New World orderlies East and West, meanwhile, want off that wheel. Here they would bomb all dissent down a memory hole in order to build upon the resultant rubble pile their failed-so-oft-as-attempted global paradise. Over there the final suicide must come to pass.

Leave them to their visions of Nirvana; our heaven begins anew each day on God’s green earth among its blessed warts and blemishes; no joining any communist mob whose instigators would forbid censorship, religious persecution, want and fear simply by censoring those who disagree with their prosecuting prayer in public, redistributing private wealth and assassinating suspected terrorists. Self-governed individuals want none of Jewish FDR’s “Four Freedoms” schtick conscripting and mobilizing White peoples to destroy one another.

The choice

Any stupidly misguided labor force that fails to discern such entrapments delivers itself unwittingly into slave galleys, armies and tributary civilian corps regimented by those naming the quotas openly or secretly.

“I’m sorry!” cannot undo harms we’ve inflicted upon ourselves and others, though error confessed amends one’s attitude. A true freeman maturing from naiveté toward wisdom takes challenges as opportunities, and instead of merely “defending” his turf proclaims its non-negotiable premises.

This duty of advancing to full potential requires willpower – one kind or the other. That’s a decision. Stubbornly demanding instant gratification for any idea that pops into the head, especially if placed there by some craven ignoramus whose sole power is manipulating others to do what he can’t, brings us eventually into his camp of the prestidigitatious. Casual failure to think for oneself is by default a choice, but none to brag about.

Moving distinctly apart from the many who serve as cannon fodder in these wars to end the ones they help perpetuate, we’ll not march to the emancipators’ drumbeat for a “war on terror” promising changeless peace and multiculturalism for everybody except themselves. The real dividing line is between relatively few who get it and those that don’t. Paradoxically, this finds the less cowardly – even among quite a few of our acquaintances – unable to see what today’s Mideast intrigues are about, and dying to prove there’s nothing new under the sun.

Stick with what works

Why go fighting one Jewish-instigated war after another? This question contains its answer, so it’s merely a matter of getting them off our backs. We had WWII because WWI returned such intoxicating dividends for those too stoned on greed to understand their self-punishing addiction. Everybody is both blessed and afflicted by what the moving finger has writ or whom we’ve let guide our actions, whether that instructor was a Socrates or Satan. No one of us is perfect. We must elect among the remnant possibilities where to turn next.

Decisions! Are they really that tough? We Southerners chose to fight back when our brothers up North in a shrunken union of States decided upon invading us, ahem, for no purpose beyond “freeing the slaves” that their very own Connecticut vessels had brought over from Africa. No one can honestly deny that the incompatible Negro enjoys more rights today than we Whites, yet after decades of forced integration he is unassimilated and unassimilable. Many of those actions in the 1860s and 1960s on both sides were more hasty than rational.

That was the case when “we” decided to Remember the Maine, the Lusitania, Pearl Harbor, the Tonkin Gulf, the USS Cole, the Twin Towers, Saddam’s Weapons of Mass Destruction, etc., etc., etc.

We didn’t decide anything! The WMDs called printing presses did, in each instance when craven ignoramuses returned to their sole capability, that is, manipulating others to do what they can’t – namely work, fight aboveboard openly, love and produce. Will such scoundrels keep soldiers marching to that drumbeat forever?

Yes, or until enough of us catch on about who needs help; that it’s not we but they.

Deciding the “news”

Looking back to the so-called Civil War where this power of the press shifted into overdrive, a little research will show how a Jewish mediacracy took near-total control of all public policy. Lincoln’s bankrollers, seeking to capitalize on having bought him sufficient publicity and the highest office, immediately asked their boy to Remember Fort Sumter, by locking up draft dodgers, uncooperative editors and State legislators “for the duration.”

“Incorporation” theories thus replaced responsible individual decisions. With the South lying prostrate, diverse newspapers and book publishers were gone, while the reconstructed ones remaining sang, Victory Over Rebellion!

That tune never changes; only its words. Twice against Germany those drums came beating Onward, Christian Soldiers! as we attacked our European brothers who were wearing Gott bei uns belt buckles. Today’s emancipators for occupying Serbia, Iraq, Afghanistan, Libya, Syria, etc., etc., etc., no longer chant Christian morality, that’s now passé, as the lyrics become enigmatic: Safety Over Freedom!

Let us take a deep breath and resolve to attempt something well beyond “voting” in today’s black box games, for we must turn not the other cheek but our fullest attention upon the quintessentially disruptive Jews. How? First, by admitting the effectiveness of their all-out methods. Okay, but we’re few. So are they. Hollywood’s subversion stalled and outlasted the House and Senate investigations of its Communist activities; that was then. Ordinary video-producing patriots are now reopening the case against such traitors. Rather than conventions and plans the enemy is so clever at subverting, let’s decide upon our flag and battle cry.

The 1960s drumbeat – for integrating all races, employment practices and “sexual orientations” into a universal corporation – is today, despite the mediacracy’s whining about “racism” and “homophobia” along with other gems they’ve coined, in 2012 a failed, exposed and bankrupt, over-the-hill experiment. America herself, when viewed as the District of Corruption, is a stinking corpse; yes, an embodiment of everything the eternal Jew must bring himself to stop praising.

And, once he renounces instigating the Negroes and Mexicans against us, turns off his war drums, stops trying to gain control of everything, leaves children a childhood, rises above glamorizing vulgar language and constant lies, we’ll possibly accept his having matured like Goethe’s Reineke the Fox from deceit to wisdom and decide not exile him back to the steppes of Asia.
